8 Municipal Court Judges Are Named By Roosevelt

Nominations Late, So New Tribunals Won't Convene on July 1, as Planned

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated eight men for judgeships on the new Municipal Court of Appeals and the Municipal Court, as provided by the recently enacted court merger bill, but his list of nominees appeared to have reached the Senate Judiciary Committee too late to insure that the new tribuanls will begin operation July 1, as scheduled.

For chief judge of the three-man appellate court, the President nominated William E. Richardson, prominent attorney and a native of Washington. The position carries an annual salary of $9500.

Nominated for his associates were Nathan Cayton, currently on the municipal bench, and Andrew McCaughrin Hood, attorney, of 1823 Nineteenth Street Northwest, at salaries of $9000.

For Municipal Court

For the Municipal Court, a ten-judge tribunal which will represent a merger of the old police and municipal courts, the President nominated:

George P. Barse, Westchester Apartments, to be chief judge at a salary of $8500.

Walter J. Casey, currently on the police court, to succeed himself at a salary of $8000—the same pay to be drawn by all other associate municipal court judges.

Brice Clagett, Landover, Md.; Nathan R. Margold, 2964 Newark Street, and Aubrey B. Fennell, 1843 Lamont Street Northwest, to be associate judges.

Clagett succeeds the late Judge George C. Aukam; Margold will fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of Judge Robert E. Mattingly's term and Fennell will succeed Cayton, elevated to the appellate court.

The other associate judges will be current members of the old Police and Municipal Courts. They are Judges Armond W. Scott and Ellen K. Raedy of the Municipal Court and Judges John P. McMahon, George D. Neilson and Hobart Newman of the Police bench.

No Hearing Date Announced

On receipt of the nominations, Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, turned them over to a subcommittee composed of Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee and chairman, also, of the subcommittee; Senator Murdock (Democrat) of Utah and Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio.

A 63-year-old woman died at Casualty Hospital of injuries received June 12, and five other persons, including a 7-year-old boy, were injured in local traffic accidents yesterday.

Mrs. Carla Gilgash, 63, of 2509 Twenty-second Street Northeast, was knocked down by an automobile at Bladensburg and Queens Chapel Roads on June 12.

Police said the operator of the car which struck Mrs. Gilgash was Franklin Niess, 26, of 3639 Nichols Avenue Southeast. He will appear at a coroner's inquest, the date of which has not been set.

Seven-year-old Leonard Smith of 28 Seaton Place Northwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital with concussion and a hip injury after he was struck in the 1700 block G Street Northwest. Police did not hold the driver.

Four women received cuts and bruises when the sedan they occupied in a funeral procession was in collision with a taxicab operated, police said, by Arthur J. Hartley, jr., 29 of 1311 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest.

They were given first aid by a private physician and identified themselves as Constance I. Greer, 32, of 539 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast; Bessie McDowell, 60, of 1537 Sixth Street Northwest; Mary J. Smith, 65 of 531 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast, and Laura V. Davis, 60 of 947 Florida Avenue Northwest.

Principle of Democracy

Rep. Paddock Urges District Be Allowed Delegate to House

(See Editorial, "Step Toward Democracy," on Page 10).

Restoration of the District's right to send an elected delegate to the House of Representatives was urged in the House yesterday by Representative Paddock (Republican) of Illinois.

Moreover, the granting of such representation in Congress should be only a stop-gap measure, he asserted, and should be followed up after the war with other steps to enfranchise the city and authorize its self-government.

Paddock said that if the proposal met with approval, he would introduce legislation placing the matter before Congress. The District had such a delegate in the House from 1871 to 1875.

"The necessity for an elected spokesman, giving his full time to his constituents and dealing as an equal with the other members of the House, has been recognized as to Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico," he said. "Why not give similar consideration to the District of Columbia?"

He asserted that during the war emergency it would be impossible to consider "the complete reorganization which some day will take place," but declared that restoration of the delegate could be done now without lengthy discussion or representation.

"At a time when we are risking our national existence to defend the principle of democracy," he told the House, "more than 800,000 residents of Washington have no voice whatever in their Government. It is also true that the municipal machinery through which Congress exercises its powers over this disfranchised community is complicated, cumbersome and inefficient. It is unsatisfactory to Congress, to the District officials who try to make it function, and most emphatically, to the people who have to live under its control."

Outlining the interim advantages which would result from Congressional representation for the city, he continued:

"The delegate, as spokesman for 800,000 people, would assemble public opinion, analyze municipal problems and present them to the House. His work would relieve much of the pressure on the Commissioners, and the House and Senate District Committees.

"The chairmen and members of these committees deserve the greatest credit for their efforts, but all of them have to consider District matters in addition to the affairs of the communities and people they were elected to represent. They would probably welcome the assistance of a District delegate, who would take over the preliminary conferences and investigations

WPB to Mesh Production With Strategy

Reorganization Will Bring Experts in Each Field Together

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Closer linking of America's war production to United Nations' grand strategy will be one aim of forthcoming reorganization in the War Production Board, it was learned last night, after WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson told a Senate committee that the democratic nations are now building war material faster than the Axis.

A spokesman for the WPB said that the problem of continuously watching production and distribution of war materials in terms of war strategy, and the reverse task of adjusting strategy to available supplies, was expected to form one part of WPB reorganization.

This continuous examination of strategy and purchasing policies would be conducted by a group with WPB, Army, Navy, and possibly White House representatives, and would be expected to continue into the American domestic war economy the conclusions reached by Nelson and the United Nations' chiefs of staff.

Still Behind in Stocks

Nelson, testifying before the Senate Committee Investigating National Defense, headed by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, said that while the United Nations are now believed to be producing more war material than our enemies, they still must catch up with the reserve war supplies produced by the Axis before the war.

He said he hoped before many months to see the United Nations overcome the Axis reserves of materials.

"The sights are high" on America's present war production program, Nelson said.

Declaring that of America's projected 220-billion-dollar production program 140 billion must be to produce war goods during this year and next, Nelson said this aims at

Minority Group Attacks Critics Of War Dept.

Democratic Members Claim Report Was 'Biased, Intemperate'

By the Associated Press

Ten Democratic members of the House Military Affairs Committee filed a minority report yesterday charging that the committee's recent criticism of the War Department was "biased and intemperate."

The majority report, made public Tuesday, was approved by three Democrats and nine Republicans. It said "nearly every conceivable type of extravagant waste" had been uncovered in an investigation of war contracts.

The minority signers said they could not find language adequate "to express our condemnation" of the procedure under which the majority report was filed. They complained that members had no time to read it.

"We regret to see approximately 15 months' of effort beclouded, if not destroyed, by a hastily considered, loosely prepared, harshly worded and biased report," said the minority members, Representatives Thomason of Texas, Harter of Ohio, Edmiston of West Virginia, Merritt of New York, Costello of California, Brooks of Louisiana, Sparkman of Alabama, Kilday of Texas, Davis of Tennessee and Fitzgerald of Connecticut.

"We believe, on the whole," they said, "that the War Department, Navy Department and War Produc-

Honolulu, June 25 (INS).—American authorities today ordered United States currency withdrawn from circulation in Hawaii, to be replaced with "Hawaiian series" currency, which is virtually script.

This would balk the Japanese invasion practice of calling in the official currency of places captured, and issuing instead worthless Japanese script.

Landmarks Threatened

Nelson Hints Famed Statuary May Go for Metal Salvage

Famed Washington statuary and landmarks in public parks may be utilized in the ever-growing maw of war, depending upon the spirit of the community to release these unused metals in America's all-out effort for victory.

War Production Chief Donald Nelson yesterday told Congress "we may indeed find it necessary before we are through to go well beyond what is normally considered scrap."

He asserted a "section of our salvage group has been working on special projects for bringing into the scrap market so-called dormant scrap, such as unused elevated railway structures."

Nelson added "in Europe, the process has gone further to include taking in such sources as metal fences and statuary, and other decorative metal work. Any one of us can walk down any street in Washington and see substantial quantities of metals that might thus be used."

In this connection, Herbert L. Gutterson, chief of WPB salvage groups, pointed out that in time famed Washington statuary, such as General Jackson on his spirited metal charger in Lafayette Park and the Mexican War cannons at its base, may go into the metal drive.

Not only these, but Gen. Winfield Scott at famed Scott Circle, and General Thomas, whose metal replica stands in Thomas Circle over the Massachusetts Avenue underpass, may also be sacrificed.

In addition the bronzes of Polish Revolutionary Hero Kosciusko, von Steuben, Lafayette and Rochambeau, also in Lafayette Square, may be utilized.

However, Gutterson made it clear

Prelude to Action

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The United States yesterday declared Europe an active combat area for American forces and set up a G. H. Q. in London to prepare for offensive operations against the Nazi-held continent.

A War Department communique announced the formal establishment of a "European Theater of Operations for United States Forces" and the selection of one of the Army's ace tacticians to head it.

He is Maj. Gen. Dwight David Eisenhower, an air-minded infantryman, who has been chief of Army war plans and formerly was right-hand man to Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Already in London

Eisenhower is already in London, having flown there within the past day or so, following conferences in the United States with President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Lord Mountbatten, chief of the British commandos.

He is expected to organize his staff and command, weld the thousands of American troops in the British Isles into an effective fighting team, and prepare for an eventual second front in Europe.

Meetings have been scheduled with Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the British general staff, and other ranking British war chiefs, to plan the offensive blows believed to be the subject of current Roosevelt-Churchill talks here.

One of General Eisenhower's first moves is expected to be formation of an American Army Air Force in Britain to join the R. A. F. in large-scale nightly bombings raids on Germany.

While an Allied invasion of the European continent, with American troops in the vanguard, may be

Foe Losing Heavily

By Henry Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Friday), June 26.—Falling back again before the hammer blows of what appears to be a full-fledged German offensive in the Ukraine, the Russians early today acknowledged the loss of the railway junction city of Kupyansk, 60 miles southeast of Kharkov.

The Soviet bureau of information announced that while the defenders of Sevastopol beat off continuing heavy enemy attacks yesterday, the hard-fighting soldiers of the Ukraine struggled against "advancing Fascist troops."

The German drive in the Kharhov sector thus went into its fifth day with the Russians announcing for the first time in weeks the loss of an important town to the Nazis.

Kupyansk, is 40 miles north of Izyum, the northern end of the Izyum-Barvenkova line, the area in which the Russians this spring thwarted a German push toward Rostov by launching their own surprise offensive.

May Be Main Offensive

The German drive toward the coveted, oil-filled Caucasus now may have started, with the Germans apparently trying to swing around north of Russian positions in the Izyum area.

(The German high command on Thursday mentioned for the first time that it had launched an offensive in the Kharkov area, agreeing with Soviet reports that it was launched Monday.

(Frequently in the past such announcements of new drives have been withheld until they had scored at least an initial success. Berlin's taking notice of this sector may indicate the German leaders now ex-

Gives Lie to Tokyo

Moscow Decides Japanese, Not U. S. Sub, Sank Freighter

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Friday), June 26.—A Japanese submarine torpedoed and sank the 4761-ton Russian merchant vessel Angarstroi on May 1 off the coast of Japan, the Soviet government charged today in its first mention of a sinking which the Japanese had blamed upon the United States.

(Coupled with private information from Chungking that Japan has a million troops in Manchuria poised for an attack on Siberia next month, the official radio broadcast—flatly charging Tokyo with an unfriendly act after slow and careful investigation of the facts—brought nearer reality the threat of war which has hung over Asiatic Russia for months.

(Blame for the ship's sinking was placed on the Japanese, strangely enough, on the same day that the crew of a Russian steamer now in Sydney, Australia, reported their guns had sunk a submarine, presumably Japanese, which had attacked them three times.)

(Both incidents, along with recent conferences on the Japanese situation that have taken place in Moscow, renewed the belief that any spark might set off the long-expected Russo-Japanese war.)

The crew of the Angerstroi now in Harbin, Manchuria, on its way home, reported that two Japanese submarines had come to the surface immediately after the Angarstroi sank at a point 32 miles off the Japanese coast.

The Japanese press tried to blame an American submarine for the sinking, the Soviet radio recalled, and then added, "but this version does not coincide with the facts" as disclosed by the survivors.

The two Japanese submarines stayed with the survivors' small boats until another Russian vessel picked the seamen up and landed them at Dairen, in Japanese-leased territory at the tip of the Kwantung Peninsula south of Manchuria.

The Angarstroi first was detained by a Japanese warship 130 miles off the Japanese coast and forced to proceed to a Japanese port for inspection, the radio added.

When she was released, the announcer said, she followed a course indicated by the Japanese.

Japs, Nazis Blamed U. S.

The Japanese early in May claimed that an American submarine had sunk the Angarstroi.

The German radio on June 21 said the Japanese foreign office had called the attention of its Ambassador to Russia "to the possibility that the freighter was sunk by a United States submarine in an effort to create friction between the Soviet Union and Japan.

Two armed United States patrol boats, on watch for the attacks of submarine raiders in the Atlantic, have been sunk by Axis submarines with a loss of 20 lives, the Navy announced yesterday.

Earlier in the day, the department had told of the loss of a medium-sized Norwegian merchant vessel several hundred miles off the Southeast coast, and last night the Colombian government announced the sinking of the Colombian schooner Resolute in the Caribbean, a total loss of four ships to submarine action made public during the day.

Sixteen crew members were lost when the 840-ton ocean-going tug Gannet was torpedoed. Four oth-

Middle East Will Be Held, Churchill Says

U. S. Leaders Leave White House Parley In Confident Mood

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Extraordinary conferences of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill with congressional leaders and the Pacific War Council rekindled hope yesterday that the Middle East can be held and developed an open appeal from China for immediate air support from the Allied Powers.

Statements of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill in the privacy of the White House struck a spark of real optimism among Congressmen and diplomats who were summoned to the Executive Mansion. With their new global strategy now complete and presumably calling for a supreme blow at the heart of Germany, they frankly reviewed prospects on all battle fronts in a day-long series of conferences.

Armies Locked In First Round Of Tremendous Battle for Egypt

Cairo (Friday), June 26.—The whole striking force of the Axis North African Corps, numbering up to 100,000 troops with three tank divisions, was driving furiously today in the face of savage British resistance upon Mersa Matruh, vital rail town and base, 130 miles inside Egypt from the Libyan border.

After abandoning its Salum-Sidi Omar frontier defense line and retreating into Egypt for distances of from 60 to 95 miles, the hard-pressed British Eighth Army turned and gave fierce battle to Field Marshal Erwin Rommel.

Rommel's "parade," that covered more than 60 miles of Egyptian territory in the first day and at least 40 in the second, suddenly became a grim, gigantic battle.

The British were aided by scores of heavy American Army bombers that joined in a violent 24-hour blasting of distant Bengasi, while R. A. F. and South African fliers severely strafed the Axis columns crowding into the struggle for Egypt.

Latest information from the front, received in Cairo about midnight, said a tremendous pitched engagement was raging in the low-lying coastal desert between Sidi Barrani, now apparently in Axis hands, and Mersa Matruh.

Rommel was hurling as many as 600 heavy tanks, hundreds of armored cars and some 10,000 supporting vehicles, carrying hosts of German-Italian infantry and supplies, into the fray. He was bringing up hundreds of mobile guns, including the versatile 88-millimeter weapons.

He was embarked upon a spectacular race to gain access to the 220-mile Mersa Matruh-Alexandria

R. A. F. Bombers Strike At Germany 'in Force'

London, (Friday), June 26 (AP).—R. A. F. bombers struck "in force" at targets in Germany during the night, it was stated authoritatively today.

This marked the first attack on Germany since Monday night when Emden was blasted. (Berlin said Bremen was the target, and that 30 planes were shot down.)

24-Inch Cannon, World's Biggest, Shells Sevastopol

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Moscow, June 25.—At the end of their third week of offensive against Sevastopol, the Germans now are firing the heaviest gun in the world, a gun whose bore is 24 inches in diameter.

The gun is far larger than anything used before in this war, which up to now has been limited to guns of 8, 12 and 14 inch caliber. It is far larger than the German guns that shelled Paris in the first World War, which had a range of 75 miles or more but a caliber of between 9 and 12 inches.

(There were indications that the new gun is a rifle or howitzer, with comparatively long range, rather than a mortar, which lobs bombs or mines a short distance.)

The chances are that the new gun is unable to fire many rounds, the life of other unusually heavy guns being notoriously short. The Germans are using it against the ruins among which the Russian defense positions are concealed and protected against the constant shellfire and aerial bombing.

With the promise of extra gasoline as "bait," the Office of Civilian Defense yesterday announced its 3000 councils in the rationed area would assume responsibility for bringing automobile owners together in car sharing clubs.

If a car club is formed, it was pointed out in a statement by Director James M. Landis, applicants for a supplemental ration of gasoline under the new plan effective July 22 will be "relieved of answering any questions about alternative means of transportation."

"We will suggest methods of forming the clubs and will ask the defense councils to provide the organization for putting them into quick operation," Landis said, declaring the OCD's role was to assist the public in complying with the new OPA regulations that provide membership in a club is prerequisite—with few exceptions—to obtaining gasoline beyond that purchasable with the standard "A" cards.

Failure of the car club plan, Landis declared, might seriously endanger war production efforts. He made public an open letter to all car owners in the rationed area. It bore the signatures of Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes, WPB Director Donald M. Nelson, ODT Director Joseph B. Eastman and OPA Administrator Leon Henderson.

"This plan is a vital part of our war effort," the letter declared. "Without it we would not be able to make our privately owned autos bear the portion of public transportation to which our country is geared, creating danger of breakdown of our railroad, bus and streetcar facilities, and resulting in serious interference with war production."

"The critical shortage of gasoline in the East, due to lack of facilities to transport it from the oil producing areas, necessitates strictest rationing of motor fuel and extreme measures for getting the most out of the available supply," it continued.

In organizing the community on a war gasoline basis, Landis said, the defense council would seek the active support of service clubs, civic organizations and other patriotic groups. Neighborhood centers will be set up for registration and organization of group riders. All local agencies and individuals

Slaughter Continues

Second Czech Town Wiped Out In Heydrich Death Reprisals

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—Nazis have obliterated a second humble Czech village and slain all its men in a new reprisal for the assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, the hangman, it was stated today in reports filtering from the terror-ruled confines of Germany's "new Europe."

The community was Lezaky, population 100, in a farming district of Bohemia, about 70 miles southeast of Prague.

Its death sentence apparently was identical to that which the Germans themselves announced on June 10 had been meted out to Lidice, near Prague.

Lidice's male population of about 350 all died by firing squad, its women were sent to concentration camps and its children to "educational institutions."

Today listeners for the Czecho-Slavak government-in-exile reported that a Budapest broadcast said Lezaky had been razed. The Budapest radio quoted official announcements in the Prague newspapers.

It did not say what happened to the people, but the Vichy French news service quoted the announcement as saying all adult males had been executed. As in the case of Lidice, the excuse was the allegation that Lezaky harbored parachutists blamed by the Germans for Heydrich's death.

In less spectacular phases of the continuing purge, it was announced in Prague that 18 Czechs had been sentenced to death there and 12 at Bruenn yesterday on charges of being in contact with enemy agents, possessing weapons or failing to

Nazis Take Mlle. Oddon To Germany

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, June 25.—Yvonne Oddon, one of the three French women scientists reported yesterday condemned to death by Nazi authorities in occupied France, has been taken to eastern Germany with a train-load of other prisoners in "almost chain gang conditions," according to further information reaching London from an unimpeachable source.

The fate of the other two condemned women is not at present known, although it is believed possible that they too have been sent into Germany.

Mlle. Oddon, it is stated, was sentenced to death on ill-defined charges, apparently based on her patriotism, resistance to Nazi rule, and a stubborn refusal to do scientific work for the Germans. Her head was shaved and at times during the journey she was handcuffed, it is said.

British Call men of 50

London (Friday), June 26 (AP).—Britain today ordered registration of all men up to 50 and all women up to 45 in a new drive to mobilize all able-bodied citizens for war industries.

Previous top age limits on registration have been 45 for men and 41 for women.

The Ministry of Labor reported that many married women in the new registration would be called on for local part-time work, releasing younger women for war industrial jobs or the uniformed auxiliary services.

Unexpected Words

Lisbon, Portugal, June 25 (AP).—Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, anti-democratic premier of Portugal, in discussing postwar economic problems tonight, mentioned "an eventual English victory."

Many persons, he said, undoubtedly planned to "turn an eventual English victory into an 'ideological victory' in order to replace in former positions those principally responsible for the disorder and misery of the last 20 years."

Rommel's New Plane

London, June 25 (INS).—German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's air forces in North Africa are using new-type dive bombers, the Evening Standard's military correspondent reported today.

pect the effort to be successful.)

The Russians have acknowledged loss of ground consistently since they announced early Tuesday that the Germans had taken the initiative on the Kharkov front.

The communique issued early Wednesday said the Red soldiers had fallen back to new positions and yesterday's report said the Germans had driven a wedge into the Red defenses.

The Soviets said there were no material changes on other sectors but told of successes by Red forces in unidentified areas, including the sinking of two transports by field artillery and the partial annihilation of two battalions of enemy infantry.

Sevastopol a Ruin

Sevastopol, now virtually in ruins under a pall of smoke and dust, went into its fourth week of resistance to the death with its outer defenses shell-torn and overrun but its inner fortress line intact.

In the first detailed report from the Ukraine front, Red Star said masses of German infantry had been unable to follow through a breach opened temporarily by a concentrated onslaught in which two tank divisions knifed deep into the Russian defenses, then were cut off.

Red Star said the intensity of tank battles was increasing, losses were piling higher and hills and villages were changing hands with charge and counter-charge.

The battle for Sevastopol was most violent north and south of the port, where the Germans were reported dying by thousands in an attempt to deepen their penetration into the defense system.

Although dispatches from the city acknowledged its position was "quite serious," Red Star reported that the tremendous losses the Germans had suffered—losses estimated at 5 to 1 for the defenders—were sapping the strength of the assault.

"In the last few days the Germans have weakened a little in their attacks on our positions as a result of immense losses," the army newspaper said, "but they still are superior in numbers, thus permitting them to carry on violent battles in several sectors."

Russian accounts of the first 21 days of the new onslaught said six German and Rumanian divisions had been defeated, three others suffered staggering losses, and Nazi tanks and planes had been destroyed by the hundreds.

The defeated divisions were listed as the German Twenty-second, Fiftieth, 132d and Seventy-second and the Rumanian First and Eighteenth. Those suffering extreme losses were said to be the German Twenty-fourth and 117th and the Rumanian Fourth.

Dispatches from the besieged city said that resistance, although admittedly difficult, continued over the yellow, rocky soil that has been drenched with blood.

Aid for the battered defense forces was reported brought to Sevastopol by a warship of the Black Sea fleet which steamed into port at the height of the fighting, bringing supplies and reinforcements, and left with wounded after turning its guns on the German positions for two hours.

The fire power the Germans have concentrated on Sevastopol was described in dispatches from the port as surpassing anything yet loosed in the war. Bombs have fallen on the city at a rate of 1000 a day, and the destruction has been increased by the steady pounding of heavy artillery.

Almost the entire city was in ruins—its houses with blue and green painted balconies and its streets and parks lined with blooming chestnut trees destroyed by the shellfire and the bombs.

Underground, in shelters so deep that only one person was killed in a recent air raid in which 800 bombs were dropped, the work of supplying the fighting line continued.

'Impressed' Attache Finds Lessons to Be Learned From Soviet

By the Associated Press

Moscow, June 25.—Back from the first trip made by United States Army officers to the German-Russian front, Lieut. Col. Joseph A. Michela declared tonight he was "highly impressed" by the Red army and had "learned lessons which will be helpful to our troops."

"I can honestly say, since I have been to the front, I have an even higher opinion of the Red army," he added. "The lessons of the Red army will be valuable to Russia's allies."

Michela, United States military attache, spent three days at the front with Maj. Richard Park, jr., assistant military attache, and two British officers. They visited an army commander, Lieutenant General Fedyuninsky.

(There was no indication just what part of the front was visited, but reports from Stockholm in March said a Major General Fedyuninsky had been assigned by the Russian command to raise the siege of Leningrad and had been fighting in the Leningrad sector at that time. This apparently was the same general mentioned by Michela, promoted to lieutenant general.)

The Americans devoted their first visit to a close study of military details, including organization, tactics, personnel, transport and supply. They said they expected to make further trips to the front soon.

Visit Quiet Sector

The trip was the result of the United States-Russian agreement and the British-Russian treaty providing for the fullest possible exchange of information. (There has been criticism of the failure of the Russians to let their Allies see the Red army in action.)

The sector the observers visited was at least temporarily quiet, with only sporadic artillery fire across muddy fields. Rain prevented aerial activity but the Americans were given full opportunity to study the workings of the Red army.

"They couldn't have shown an observer troops under more difficult terrain and weather conditions than we went into," Michela told correspondents.

With an exceptionally cold and late spring still prevailing there, Michela said an old native peasant told him he had not seen so much rain in one season in 26 years.

The troops, Michela said, were "all very confident and their morale was good. It has been raining for two months but even in those circumstances they seemed cheerful."

Careful of Their Guns

The officer declared he was particularly impressed by the Red army officers and personnel, and its equipment and transport.

He described 42-year-old Fedyuninsky as "very capable, an excellent disciplinarian, a soldier all his life."

"Some staff officers are still younger, about 35 years old, all smart, quick, and very friendly," he added.

"The equipment I saw was excellent," he said. "The men were careful to keep it well oiled. That is a good sign. When a man is up to his knees in mud but keeps his rifle cleaned and oiled he is a good soldier."

The equipment is entirely Soviet except for a few German trucks, he said.

Transport, he said, "is moving along," with much construction work on the roads apparent.

The Americans visited Fedyuninsky's army headquarters, also inspected a guards division and went close to the front lines in reoccupied territory.

Axis and British Troops Locked in Battle

ROMMEL'S ADVANCE CHECKED—After advancing across the Libyan border 60 miles into Egypt (broken arrow), Axis armies led by German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel were engaged by the British between Sidi Barrani and Mersa Matruh, heavily fortified base where it appears the British intend to make their main stand. British abandonment of Salum and Sidi Omar was announced in a terse communique report to police. One of those sentenced was said to have wounded a German policeman in resisting arrest.

Exclusive of Lidice and Lezaky, the latest Czech government estimate here said at least 382 patriots had been killed since the attack on Heydrich but this figure did not include 50 or more other recent executions.

Heydrich, the ruthless Gestapo agent who was Reichs "protector" of Bohemia and Moravia—remnant of Czecho-Slovakia—was mortally wounded May 27 by fragments of a British-made bomb, the Nazis said.

The assassins, described as former Czech army officials who were dropped by parachute from a British plane, last week were reported killed in a Prague church while resisting arrest, but the mass slaughter among Czech civilians continues.

In other occupied countries, too, the population is answering the Nazi terror with sabotage, according to reports reaching London. These included:

Seven Rexists (Belgian Nazis) killed at Liege in a bombing at the Nagant electrical manufacturing plant.

A munitions train derailed at Meirelbeke, near Ghent.

Several German officers killed in an attack on a train near Oslo.

Woman at Roanoke Is Grief Stricken

Roanoke, Va., June 25 (AP).—A woman in broken English telephoned the World-News today to inquire whether it was true that a second Czech village had been wiped out.

Informed that such a report had been received, she asked that the name of the village be spelled. This was done. She was asked whether she wanted the bulletin read, but she burst into sobs at news that the village was Lesaty and hung up before information could be obtained as to her name and whether she had relatives or friends there.

R. A. F. Attacks Shipping

London, June 25 (AP).—British fighter planes made a sweep over the western Channel this evening and attacked enemy shipping off the coast of Brittany. Two of the attacking planes are missing.

Bad weather prevented the R. A. F. from attacking German industrial centers last night, but a raid was made by night bombers against the Nazi submarine base at St. Nazaire, France.

coastal railway before the British receive sufficient reinforcements to stem the tide.

Lieut. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie's Eighth British Army, however, was putting up obstinate resistance from more defensible positions to which it had fallen back in its retreat after Rommel moved against the western Egyptian frontier.

From their stronger positions and with reinforcements bolstering them, the British were reported 48 hours after the struggle was contesting virtually every foot of the Axis advance on Matruh. The decisive phase of the battle for western Egypt appeared in progress, only launched.

Hammering hard at the principal root of Rommel's lengthening push, "several scores" of the four-motored United States Liberators together with British Wellington bombers struck successive blows at Bengasi through Wednesday and far into the night, advices stated.

The dispatches described the bombardment as "probably the heaviest" ever unleashed against any objective in the North African theater. An R. A. F. Cairo communique, couched in restrained official terminology, called it "heavy." It said the huge Liberators, manned by American crews, and the Wellingtons directed their assault against shipping in Bengasi Harbor, more than 400 miles west of the present fighting front.

Further official details of the raid were not available up to a late hour tonight, but it was clear that the United States Army Air Corps has now assumed a major part in the struggle to weaken and stop Rommel's avalanche.

(The Italian high command admitted in its Thursday communique that a raid on Bengasi had caused "some damage and some wounded.")

In their first action over North Africa on Sunday night, the consolidated Liberators had joined with R. A. F. bombers in a heavy raid that was declared officially to have inflicted considerable damage and ignited towering fires at the seaport capital of East Libya where the Axis pours in most of its reinforcements and supplies to sustain Rommel's forces.

Cairo military quarters admitted the probable accuracy of an Axis claim to have occupied Sidi Barrani, 60 miles inside the coastal frontier from Libya and the high-tide mark of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's 1940 Italian invasion of Egypt.

Yanks in Palestine, Germans Indicate

London, June 25 (AP).—The Stockholm correspondent of Reuters has quoted the German radio as relaying "Begdad reports" today which said that "part of the American troops landed at Basra about three weeks ago and stationed near Bagdad were transported in the direction of Palestine over the weekend.

(There was no confirmation from any quarter of any part of the broadcast and the context suggested it was another information-seeking move by the Axis.)

"Contrary to original plans, it is presumed these forces will now be employed in the Egyptian theater of the war," the German radio was further quoted.

"The forces which left last week consisted of an entire motorized division numbering about 11,000, or about half the forces landed several weeks ago."

Four More Vessels Sunk by U-Boats

ers lost their lives when U-boat gunfire sank another vessel, a small armed fighting craft.

The Navy communique announcing the sinkings, follows:

"Atlantic area—Two small anti-submarine patrol craft have been lost off the Atlantic Coast during the current month as a result of enemy submarine attacks.

"The U. S. S. Gannet, a sea-going tug, used to service patrol planes, was torpedoed and sunk. Sixteen members of the crew were lost.

"The YP-389, a small fishing craft, which had been taken over by the Navy and armed for antisubmarine patrol duty, was sunk by gunfire. Four members of the crew were lost.

"The next of kin of all the casualties have been notified."

The additional sinkings brought to 44 the number of American naval vessels lost since the first enemy raids on Atlantic waters last fall.

Commanders of both vessels were rescued. They were Lieut. Francis Edward Nuessle, commander of the Gannet, of 710 Second Street, Bismarck, N. Dak., and Lieut. Roderick Johnstone Philips of the smaller craft, whose home address is 115 East Thirty-seventh Street, New York.

The YP-389 formerly was the Cohasset, a fishing boat owned by R. E. O'Brien of 34 Boston Fish Pier, Boston. Built in 1941, the steel-hulled craft was acquired by the Navy, January 6, 1942, and outfitted for antisubmarine work. Lieutenant Philips, a Naval Reserve officer, was called to active duty in January.

The Gannet was a mine sweeper originally, built by Todd Shipyard Corp., New York, and placed in commission in July, 1919. She was converted to a seaplane tender in 1936 and had quarters available for 5 officers and 50 enlisted men. Whether this full complement was on board at the time she was torpedoed was not stated by the Navy.

Torpedo Boats Carried Troops From Tobruk

By Henry T. Gorrell
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Marsa Matruh, Egypt, June 25.—American-built motor torpedo boats, which for several months have been serving with the British Navy in the Mediterranean, were largely responsible for the evacuation of hundreds of soldiers and sailors from Tobruk, it was revealed today.

On reaching this advance British coastal position the Tobruk survivors who were able to work were immediately recruited to help fortify Marsa Matruh against enemy attack.

The wounded were moved to a dugout hospital preparatory to their evacuation to Alexandria.

The American MTB's, capable of more than 45 knots, were among the last vessels to leave Tobruk, the survivors said.

Marsa Matruh expects an attack at any moment. I stayed in the town last night and there were numerous alerts but no bombing, although German planes attacked just outside the town as the British were regrouping to receive the attack.

I met an American field ambulance driver who has been up to his neck handling survivors from Tobruk. He said he was determined to stand by them regardless of what happened.

The American torpedo boats not only took on scores of evacuees apiece but also fought off enemy "E-boats"—similar craft—and submarines, as British naval units withdrew.

I learned that several Royal Navy men stayed at Tobruk, determined to fight it out to the end alongside the army. One officer was last seen on a balcony of the Navy House preparing "sticky bombs"—grenades—to hurl at German tanks.

I had an unexpected reunion here with a lieutenant commander who brought me from Greece during the evacuation of the British expeditionary force from that lost country. He is now commanding a naval establishment at Marsa.

"Every time I meet you it seems something happens," he said, then grinned and shook my hand hard. He returned to his desk to dispatch signals vital to the defense of Egypt.

Jap Planes Strafed Civilians in Alaska

Noncombatants Caught 'Like Rats in Trap;' 'It Can Happen Here,' Mayor Declares

By Leland Hannum

Associated Press Staff Writer

Seattle, June 25.—First eyewitness accounts of the Japanese bombing of Dutch Harbor in the Aleutians, made public today, disclosed how heavy antiaircraft fire and even rifle fire drove off the attackers and that the Nipponese machine gunners strafed fleeing civilians "like rats in a trap."

Civilians among the 98 persons from Unalaska (Dutch Harbor is in Unalaska Bay) evacuated to Seattle aboard an Army transport, told interviewers that a Japanese fighter pilot strafed 250 civilians as they fled to the bare rocky hills for safety.

A housewife told how Unalaska's mayor—John W. Fletcher—who accompanied the evacuees here, directed the flight of five truckloads of women and children to the hills when the Jap bombers and fighter planes came over.

How many Jap planes were downed has not been announced officially, and tales brought here by civilians and servicemen, many of the latter wounded, failed to clarify that point in accounts approved by the Navy.

Mayor Fletcher said application was made for 35 death certificates after the June 3 bombing and strafing, but the total American casualty lists have not been made public.

Joseph Wynans of Des Moines, Wash., said the fleeing civilians, running toward the ravines, threw themselves on the ground as one Jap plane swooped toward them, and the strafer failed to hit a single one though his tracer bullets kicked up spurts of dirt and pebbles all around.

"It's an awful feeling you get," Wynans said. "You're like a rat. You can't move. You're cornered. You don't dare move because if you started to move, they shot you with machine guns."

"It was the loudest racket I ever heard," said Ivan Tallman, third cook aboard the bullet-pocked transport, telling how the transport's crew stood on deck and blazed away at the attackers while gun crews pumped deadly umbrellas of antiaircraft fire above the harbor.

"If the people could only realize the horror of a bombing," said Mayor Fletcher, motion picture theater operator at Unalaska who came south to confer with the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs on evacuation of natives from the area. He said the natives were "shaking like leaves" after the attacks.

"It Can Happen Here!"

"But you can't tell people," he added. "It was the same up there. Until you actually experience it, and see boys fighting for their lives, it seems far away. Let me tell you—it can happen here."

Mrs. Ida Helge, "12 years in Dutch Harbor," patted Fletcher on the back and said, "We're proud of Jack. He won't tell you, but if it hadn't been for him helping evacuate women and children to the hills, it might have been worse."

Survivors told how 500-pound bombs dug craters 12 feet deep, and how one, landing ashore, hurled rocks in every direction, one—the size of a man's head, plunged through the transport's upper deck.

"The Japs picked their day," said one of the "walking wounded," who declined to identify himself. "They came down out of broken clouds and were close when we heard them. But we weren't surprised. We were ready for them."

C. W. Flack, 45, San Francisco, ship's porter, said many thought it was an air-raid drill until someone aboard the transport saw tracer bullets, and yelled, "Hey, that's the real stuff!"

Celebration Night Before

"I spent seven months in France as an artilleryman in the last war," Flack added, "but I saw more action in two days at Dutch Harbor than in all of those seven months."

And other members of the crew told how "we had a band for dinner and bombs for breakfast, "after the gala arrival of the transport the night before climaxed in the air raid the next morning.

One fire ashore burned for three days and still was smoking when the evacuation ship sailed for Seattle, said Lamar Chandler, waiter, from San Francisco.

"Pinky" Gray, civilian worker from Great Falls, Mont., shook his head sadly over the death of his buddy from a bomb concussion, and asked:

"How would you feel if you jumped out of bed in a two-story building one morning and found everything afire and the planes overhead and the sky full of bullets and planes?

"Well, that's the way I felt!"

"Pinky" shuttled a couple of machine-gun shells back and forth between his hands and said:

"War really is hell!"

that these unused dormant metal figures will not be thrown into the scrap drive, unless it is vital, and not before the attitude of the public has been determined.

Washington's largest and most costly piece of statuary, stretching across the Mall at the foot of he Capitol, the Grant Memorial, with its bronze groups of Union Calvary, may also be a victim of the war effort.

There are countless other statues in the National Capital. WPB officials hope, however, that they wont have to disturb them because they are so closely identified with Washington.

READY if needed to join the campaign for metal made precious by the demands of war are the statues of General Grant (top), and General Scott. Helen Horwitz is admiring the former at Pennsylvania and Maine Avenues and Lois Hardwick is looking up at the other Civil War general in Scott Circle

Unrest Mounts, But Churchill Friends Rally

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—Government supporters rallied quickly behind Winston Churchill tonight after 20 critics of the Prime Minister's war direction had introduced a non-confidence motion in the House of Commons.

Four Conservatives and a National Unionist signed an amendment to the Insurgents' motion, pledging "unqualified support" to Churchill, and members predicted the government would beat down the condemnatory motion after bitter debate.

The Insurgents, however, were confident that the vote would show many Conservative abstentions and a growing lack of faith in the Prime Minister's strategical judgment, particularly in consequence of the British defeat in Africa.

The debate will take place after Churchill returns from America. It may be preceded by a general shake-up in the fighting service which will disarm many critics. One suggestion heard now is that Churchill appoint a chief of combined general staff to direct all British strategy.

The chief charge of Churchill's critics is that his present strategic planning, as Minister of Defense, emphasizes aims and disregards the difficulty of finding means for a series of widely diversified operations in which there is no truly coordinated staff work.

The debate also is expected to reflect lost confidence in cooperation of the three fighting services, in supply arrangements and in Whitehall's selection of general officers for field operations.

Eight Conservatives, seven Laborites, four Independents and one Liberal signed the insurgent motion which seeks to condemn the "central direction of the war." Prominent among them were Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary, and Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes.

Council, sounded an ominous note as he left the White House.

"It is no secret, so I can say I am asking for air support for China," he said. "I stressed that at the meeting."

"Were you given an assurance of such air support," he was asked.

"That is a military secret," Soong replied, but he added that he does not doubt the President and Prime Minister sufficiently realize the dynamic importance of the Pacific theater in the ultimate winning of the war.

But other members of the war council and congressional leaders laid great emphasis on their conviction that there is reason now to believe that the war situation will improve.

Speaking for the congressional group, Speaker Sam Rayburn said "it would be safe to assume that others like myself come away very hopeful."

Walter Nash, New Zealand Minister, said after the Pacific Council meeting that "there is a job that they have in hand which will ultimately give us the results we want—the winning of the war."

Dutch Official Encouraged

The Netherlands Foreign Minister, Dr. Van Kleffens, violated his usual reserve to speak with similar optimism.

"I have rarely attended a meeting which was so encouraging," he said. "When I say that, it may sound a bit trite. But I want to emphasize that when I say 'encouraging,' I am not merely speaking in routine but I have very definite reasons for saying so."

House Republican Leader Martin said at the White House that the congregational conference was "very interesting and very encouraging." Later, on Capitol Hill, he added that Mr. Churchill had told the Congressmen that "Britain will hold and there is no danger of losing Egypt."

It was a remarkable day at the White House—exactly one week after the arrival of Mr. Churchill in the United States. Beginning at 11:30 a. m., he and Mr. Roosevelt met for 35 minutes with bipartisan congressional leaders—Vice President Henry A. Wallace, Senate Republican Leader Charles L. McNary, Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Speaker Rayburn, House Democratic Lealer John W. McCormack, House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Representative Charles A. Eaton, a Republican member of the committee.

At 12:30 p. m., the President and Prime Minister convoked a momentous session of the Pacific War Council, outstanding for the presence of war leaders of the United States, Britain and Canada.

With the President presiding, and Churchill at his side, the meeting in the Cabinet room was attended by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada, Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador; Dr. Eelco van Kleffens, The Netherlands Foreign Minister; Dr. Soong, China's Foreign Minister; President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines Commonwealth; Leighton McCarthy, Canadian Minister; Walter Nash, New Zealand Minister; Sir Owen Dixon, Australian Minister, and Lend-Lease Supervisor Harry L. Hopkins.

After a brief session to review the war fronts, the meeting was moved from the Cabinet Room to the State Dining Room of the White House, where Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Undersecretary Sumner Welles joined the assembly for a luncheon discussion of war progress and future strategy.

After that meeting, Mr. Roosevelt held a protracted conference in his office with Halifax and Secretary Hull.

U. S. Army Sets Up Command for European Theater of Operations

some time off, it is believed that United States aerial forces will soon be in action in our new theater of operations.

Air Force ground crews are already known to be in England and complete bomber and fighter squadrons may also be there getting ready for combat.

Officials here declared that the formal establishment of a "theater of operation" in any part of the world is a necesary preliminary step to combat operations. Troops move from a training to a fighting status, and the theater normally is divided into zones—front line, rear areas, etc.

The new "commanding general, European Theater" is a 51-year-old Texan, who was long associated with General MacArthur. He graduated from West Point in 1915 and during his early career became a tank expert.

In the last war, he served as a troop instructor, organized the Sixty-fifth Battalion of Engineers at Camp Meade, Md., and trained tank troops. He won the Distinguished Service Medal and reached the temporary rank of lieutenant colonel for his work in preparing Tank Corps units for overseas service.

While General Eisenhower has not served with armored troops since 1922, he is regarded as one of the Army's "best brains" on modern warfare. He holds a private pilot's license and flies his own plane, although not an accredited Army pilot.

During the latter part of General MacArthur's term as Army chief of staff, Eisenhower occupied an adjoining office, and when MacArthur went to Manila in 1935 to become Military Adviser to the Philippine Commonwealth, Eisenhower went along as his first assistant.

Since returning to the United States in 1940, the new European Theater Commander has distinguished himself in troop and staff commands. His handling of large bodies of troops in last year's mammoth maneuvers, while chief of staff of the Third Army, attracted attention. It resulted in his assignment as chief of the war plans division and later the operations division of the War Department General Staff.

He is a brother of Milton D. Eisenhower, administrator of the new Office of War Information.

In a statement issued yesterday, General Eisenhower declared that the establishment of the European theater is "a logical step" in coordinating the war efforts of Great Britain and the United States. The "rapidly increasing" numbers of American soldiers and pilots in Britain, he stated, "is evidence that we are hewing to the line" of the partnership established between the two nations by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

General Eisenhower's rise has been rapid since the war began. Still only a permanent lieutenant colonel, he became a temporary brigadier only last September. He is expected to be advanced to lieutenant general with his new assignment.

Germans Disclaim U-Boat 'Innsbruck'

Bern, June 25 (AP).—German foreign office sources were quoted in advices from Berlin tonight as saying they had no official word that the attacker of the Argentine vessel Rio Tercero was a German submarine, as charged formally by the Argentine government.

Referring to Argentine announcements that the attacking U-boat was the German Innsbruck, these German officials were quoted as saying that there was no German submarine of this name.

If the submarine had been German, these spokesmen were quoted as saying, it would have carried only a number as identification.

The Argentine government has formally and strongly protested to the German government over the sinking

Butcher Gets Post as Aide To Eisenhower

Lieut. Comdr. Harry C. Butcher, U. S. Naval Reserve, former Washington vice president for the Columbia Broadcasting System, has been assigned as personal aide to Maj. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, newly appointed commanding general of the European theater, in London, it was announced yesterday.

BUTCHER

A member of the Naval Reserve since 1938, Commander Butcher resigned from the broadcasting system when he reported to the office of Director of Naval Communications for duty June 1.

Butcher, a native of Springville, Iowa and a graduate of Iowa State College, joined C. B. S. in 1930, opening the Washington office as director. Since 1934 he has been Washington vice president of the broadcast chain.

He resides with his wife and daughter Beverly at 4435 Garfield Street Northwest and is a member of the Burning Tree and National Press Clubs.

Commander Butcher, well-known throughout the radio industry, is an authority on communications and press relations. While it is unusual for a naval officer to be named as a personal aide to an Army general, it is understood Commander Butcher's selection was at the personnal request of General Eisenhower.

15 From D. C. Area Freed by Japanese

Americans Coming Home From Thailand; Hongkong and Japan

Eight residents of the Washington area are among 629 American nationals scheduled to return from Japanese-held territory in the Pacific under exchange arrangements made through Swiss authorities, according to the State Department.

Among those coming from Hongkong are: C. A. Carter, G. B. King, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Larsen, Paul Malone and Harry H. Morse, all of the District.

Walter Kenneth Le Count, former vice president of the Export-Import Bank here, will be brought back from Thailand.

Dr. John D. Bigger, also of the District, will return from Korea.

Meanwhile it was announced by the Protestant Episcopal Church that the Rev. Claude L. Pickens, his wife and five children, of Alexandria and the District, also were reported in a list of missionaries returning from Japan where they represented the National Council of that church.

Paul Malone

Although he was born in Boston, Malone spent most of his life here and attended Georgetown University. He went to Paris as commercial attache at the United States Embassy in 1932, and returned here two years later before going to Manila, where he was connected with some confectionery enterprise. His wife still is being held by the Japanese.

His mother, Mrs. Lucy Malone, is a District resident. Other relatives here are a brother, Robert W. Malone, 1727 Nineteenth Street Northwest; and two sisters, Mrs. Josephine Morgan, 2150 P Street Northwest, and Mrs. Paul Stack, wife of a colonel at Quantico.

Walter Kenneth Le Count

An assistant to Warren Lee Pierson in the Export-Import Bank here from 1934 to 1938, Le Count and his wife went to Bangkok, Thailand, in 1938, when he served as manager of the Thai Commercial Bank.

Mrs. Le Count returned to this country with her son, 18, last spring and now lives at 2634 Lee Boulevard, Arlington, Va.

Le Count, prior to his position in the Export-Import Bank, was with the National City Bank of New York, located at several cities in the Far East. He was manager of the Manila branch from 1916 to 1933.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Larsen

Natives of Nebraska, Mr. and Mrs. Larsen have spent much time in Takoma Park here. Larsen was appointed head of the school for children of Seventh-Day Adventist missionaries at the general conference in 1926, and sailed from San Francisco in July of that year.

They returned to Takoma Park on furlough in 1934, returning to China in 1935. The school recently was moved to the outskirts of Hongkong.

Harry H. Morse

A graduate of the Washington Missionary College in Takoma Park, Morse was appointed to teach in the foreign academy at Shanghai in 1927. His wife, Alice Miller Morse, left China when women and children were evacuated some time ago and visited in Takoma Park before going to California.

Rev. Claude L. Pickens

The Rev. Mr. Pickens is the son of Claude L. Pickens, sr., 137 Webster Street Northwest, and was born in Alexandria. He was sent to Shanghai in 1926 and returned here four years ago for a short visit.

His latest communication to his father said "the Japanese have treated us very nicely."

Meanwhile the Pickens family here has heard no word since Christmas from another son, Henry, an Episcopal missionary now believed to be in Manila.

The brothers were stationed only 100 miles apart in China, but did not see each other in the four years they were there. Their wives met several times in Shanghai, however.

Prefers Superman

Boy, 7, Reads Book a Day, Follows War

OAKLAND PEMBERTON, JR.

Want to talk about the war without hearing all those traditional cliches? Have a chat, then, with Oakland Pemberton, jr., who at 7 knows all about Pearl Harbor, Thailand, and the Libyan campaign—but prefers Superman.

Oakland lives with his father and mother at 320 Tenth Street Northeast and has given evidence of being an above-average child since he was 9 months old, when his mother first noticed that he could distinguish pictures from type.

The Pembertons lived in Richmond, Va., then, and Oakland's mother, a former primary school teacher, decided to watch her son closely to see if he showed any other signs of unusual mental development.

Even at 9 months, he eyed picture books with interest and could point out a certain picture when he saw it for the second time.

At 10½ months, Oakland could balance perfectly on his father's outstretched hand.

Mrs. Pemberton made a game of teaching him the alphabet, and he knew all the letters by sight when he was 2½ years old. At 3, he astonished the Pembertons' friends by reading books the equivalent of first-grade work, and at 5 could read with the ease of a 9-year-old, according to Richmond psychologists.

Oakland just finished Grade 2-A at the Peabody School here, after completing two years' work in one, and has been promoted to Grade 3-A.

He reads anything he wishes, from war news to stories for early high school students, but his favorites are Will James' "Young Cowboy" and "Cowboy in the Making."

What he plans to do with his future? You guessed it; he wants to be a cowhand.

His mother's greatest difficulty is in keeping him supplied with reading matter, for he averages a book a day.

Navy Pilot Saves Damaged Training Plane

A Navy pilot pulled his light training plane with a broken rudder out of a spin after ordering the student pilot "over sides" and flew the disabled plane some 15 miles back to the Naval Reserve Training Base at Anacostia yesterday afternoon, landing it safely.

The plane had been on a routine training flight about 15 miles south of Washington when a coupling in the rudder snapped in the midst of a spin. The instructor, Lieut. (j. g.) A. J. Atkinson, 24, of 3539 East Capitol Street, ordered his student to jump and with the lessened load was able to regain control of the plane.

The student, Seaman Second-Class J. H. Bell, 21, of Aberdeen, Md., landed in a field close to the highway near T. B., Md. He made his way to a nearby bus station, called the base and a car was sent for him.

Lieutenant Atkinson, who was married two weeks ago in New York to Miss Helen Marie Bradley, was transferred to Anacostia in March from Pensacola Naval Air Station. Joining the Navy in August, 1940, he received his wings in May, 1941, and was just recently promoted from the rank of ensign.

Senate Passes Bill To Bolster WPA

The Senate passed yesterday an appropriation bill making $336,900,000 available for employment of 400,000 persons on WPA rolls for the year beginning July 1.

The measure goes back to the House for action on Senate amendments abolishing six regional offices but requiring the maintenance of administrator offices in each State.

The bill contains direct appropriations of 280 million dollars and reappropriations of $56,900,000 left over from the current year's funds.

Chinese Widen Gap Separating Jap Units Moving on Rail Line

By International News Service

Chungking, June 25. — Chinese troops in a series of sudden counter-smashes have driven the Japanese 12 miles west of Kweiki, strategic Kiangsi Province railway town, and are encircling Foochow to the southeast, a communique said today.

Announcement of these successes came on the heels of a heavy bombing raid by American Volunteer Group flyers on Yangtze River shipping at Hankow, which resulted in the sinking of one large Japanese warship and three smaller vessels.

The American flyers participating in this attack shot down at least 1, and probably 5, out of 21 Japanese Zero fighters that swarmed up to intercept them.

The Chinese advance past Kweiki, on the Hangchow-Nanchang Railroad, widens to 60 miles the gap between the east and west prongs of a Japanese pincer drive in Kiangsi. One enemy column had driven to Kweiki from the west, while another had pounded its way eastward to Shangjao, leaving a gap of only about 48 miles in the hands of the stubbornly fighting Chinese forces.

Upsetting Japanese plans for quick domination of the entire length of the rail line, the Chinese counterthrust is showing signs of steadily mounting strength, according to front line dispatches.

The Chinese attempt to encircle Foochow, if successful, would cut off an important enemy supply port on the east coast. Foochow is in Fukien Province, where the Japanese have been reported making extensive preparations for new offensive operations.

Car-Sharers to Get Extra Gasoline

will be given the opportunity to help.

Both the OPA and OCD will provide further suggestions and guidance for the councils, it was said.

Car clubs must be formed before the application for a supplemental ration is filed, if extra gasoline is to be allowed on this basis. Blanks for the supplemental ration may be obtained July 9, 10, and 11 when car owners register for "A" coupon books in the public schools.

This application, as outlined by OPA, will require information showing vocational need for more gasoline. The first requirement will be evidence of a car club, formed to carry four or more persons to and from work. Signatures of club members will be required on the application to show that the club is actually formed.

"If a car club is formed the applicant is relieved of answering any questions about alternative means of transportation," Landis said. "If he has not formed a club, or if he does not have full membership, he must prove that it has been impossible to do so, and also that alternative transportation is inadequate, before he can be issued a supplemental 'B' or 'C' book."

Holders of "A" books, by sharing their cars, will be able to reserve a greater part of their basic ration for family use, it was declared. The amount of gasoline provided by an "A" book has not yet been announced.

King's Romance Awaits War's End

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

The trumpets of victory will have to precede wedding bells for himself and Princess Alexandra of Greece. King Petter II of Yugoslavia indicated yesterday.

The exiled Balkan monarch at a press conference in Blair House talked about many things—about his heroic guerillas, and about American food and friendliness. Then somebody asked him about his reported engagement to Princess Alexandra, and he said.

"Oh," he said, "I just cannot say anything about that until my country is freed from the German yoke. My people are having a difficult time, and it would not be right for me to talk about romance at this time."

King Addresses Congress

King Peter, who is going on 19, seemed to feel strongly about it.

Wearing an oversized naval officer's uniform for the second day, the exiled leader of 15 million Yugoslavs talked in a good Cambridge University accent.

Later in the day, carrying out a whirlwind program, he went to Capitol Hill to address the Senate and the House of Representatives. Galleries were crowded in both chambers and from the members the boy King received a hearty ovation for what was adjudged a good speech in any Parliament.

He concluded his address in the Senate with that parched-throat feeling that all beginners have experienced. As Senator Tom Connally prepared to escort him from the dais, Peter reached for a glass of water and gulped some of it. He was about to go when he looked at the glass, grinned and reached for it again. The veteran Texas statesman looked on benignly and seemed to say: "Go on, sonny, take a good swig of it."

King Peter, who was driven out of Yugoslavia by the Germans within a few days after he had been proclaimed King, told the Senators and Representatives:

"By a cruel twist of fate I have never been able to address the representatives of my own people. A few days after the beginning of my reign all our homes and institutions were shattered by a ruthless invasion. In the days of my early youth, I had always looked forward to the moment when, like my father, I should stand in the modest Parliament building in the city of Belgrade and speak to the elected representatives of the Yugoslav people."

Fate Wills Otherwise

But, he continued, fate had willed otherwise. Then emphasizing that the great war is indivisible, and that there can be no freedom anywhere if even the smallest country is enslaved, he declared that all the Axis nations must be defeated "and all of us must be victorious."

"That is why the soldiers of the United Nations are all fighting the same battle," he said. "They may never have seen each other or even heard of each other but they are all united by the same destiny—the warriors of General Mihailovitch who fight in our mountains, the gallant British soldiers and sailors who die in the defense of freedom, the brother people of Russia who have stirred the imagination of the entire world by their heroic resistance, and brave American fighting men who are giving their lives in every ocean and on every continent of the globe . . ."

At his press conference, King Peter expressed the hope that General Mihailovitch's Chetnik army of 150,000 would be able to get more supplies from the Allies. He was asked if the Balkan Eagle was getting any supplies now.

"Yes, he is getting some, but not much," the King said, adding that the supplies were dropped from planes, that take off from some Allied base.

"We hope to get more to him," he said. "He moves around a lot and it is difficult to drop things to him."

Canvas Depicts Russian Troops

PAINTING ON EXHIBIT—"Waiting for the Enemy on the Russian Front" is the theme of this canvas by William Gropper, well-known American artist, whose work is being shown in connection with the Russian War Relief drive. The exhibit opens tonight at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building

Russian Art Exhibit Opens At 8 Tonight

An exhibition of Russian paintings and sculptures, the works of well-known Russian artists, will mark the opening tonight of the Russian War Relief Drive to raise $100,000 in Washington to purchase medical supplies for that war-torn nation.

The exhibition opens at 8 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, and will continue through next Friday.

Also to be included in the art show will be 12 specially chosen paintings by William Gropper, American painter, who has often used Russian farmers, factory workers and soldiers in his sketches.

Mme. Litvinoff Helps

In addition to the American canvases, there will be a group by Anatol Gussatinsky, loaned by Mme. Litvinoff, wife of the Russian Ambassador, who brought them from Russia to protect them from Axis bombs.

The Corcoran Art Gallery has loaned two of its most important contemporary paintings, "Lunch" by Bernard Karfiol, and "Still Life" by Maurice Sterne. Four pencil drawings by Mme. Litvinoff also will be shown.

Others represented in the show include Ben Shahn, Mitchel Siporin and Edward Millman all of whom have executed murals for Government buildings.

Rowan Heads Sponsors

The Duncan Phillips Gallery has loaned a group of 30 paintings by Americans of Russian origin, including those of Burliuk, Cikovsky, John Graham, Tchelitchev, Weber, Meyerowitz, Kantor, Walkowitz, and Breinin, as well as Karfiol and Sterne.

Edward Rowan, head of the Fine Arts Commission, arranged the exhibition for the art committee. It also includes Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Francis Biddle, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Duncan Phillips and E. Powell Minnigerode and David Finley.

Paul Robeson, noted Negro singer, will interrupt a Nation-wide tour to appear on the Russian War Relief festival program on June 30 at the Watergate.

Others to appear are the Philadelphia Balalaika Orchestra of 50 pieces, Russian dancers in native costume, and a pageant entitled "Song for American Freedom," by Harold J. Rome, composer of the labor revue, "Pins and Needles."

The Columbia Light Opera Chorus will supply the choral voices for the chanted poem, with Ethel Manning conducting.

Also listed on the program, when Lowell Thomas, noted radio commentator is to speak, are William L. Batt of the War Production Board, Maj. George Field Eliot, military analysist, and Melvyn Douglas, the actor. The movie star will act as master of ceremonies and narrator of the Watergate pageant.

Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot will act as chairman of the meeting and introduce the speakers.

Minority Group Attacks Critics Of War Dept.

tion Board are performing their duties with remarkable efficiency and are entitled to our commendation. This as no time for partisanship, hasty action, unconsidered judgment or unjust criticism. . . . This Nation is facing the most critical hour in all its glorious history and what we seek to promote is understanding, cooperation and unity."

In a defense of the Army air forces, which the majority report singled out for criticism, the minority said that while those charged with the procurement of military aircraft and equipment were "somewhat tardily alert to changing conditions," it should be remembered that efforts of the War Department to increase the size of the air force "have continually been frustrated," the opponents including some of those who approved the majority report.

In a general survey of the aviation industry, the minority said the industry "is actually capable of producing 60,000 planes annually with its present facilities and in the coming year will turn out 120,000.

Through voluntary price reductions or renegotiation of contracts, the report continued, the Army Air Force has effected a saving of $242,954,739 since the first of this year.

The minority said there was "no justification" for a majority charge that "reckless expenditures" had been made in War Department construction activities and added that evidence showed "a very determined effort . . . to immediately correct any cases of extravagance."

Army Seeks Mechanics, Nontechnician Recruits

Maj. J. M. Sanders, formerly president of the Washington Automobile Trade Association, now with the Fourth Regiment of 302d Ordnance Regiment, Camp Sutton, N. C., will come here today to recruit 180 mechanics and nontechnicians for his unit. He will establish offices in Room 600 of the Chandler Building, 1427 I Street Northwest.

The 302d Ordnance Regiment is one of two units sponsored by the National Automobile Dealers Association at the request of the Ordnance Department. All members of this unit are automobile dealers, service managers and mechanics who are needed for maintenance work on motorized equipment.

WPB Plans to Mesh Production and Strategy

building up "a supply of weapons which will match and overmatch, weapon by weapon, whatever the enemy now has or can produce."

Nelson supplemented a 34-page written progress report on war production, with two hours of testimony to the committee, in which these highlights were disclosed.

1. A drive to salvage part of the one million tons of copper in the American economy will be started shortly, starting with articles such as copper ash trays, bronze doors, and brass name plates, and leading possibly to ornamental iron and statues.

2. A substance called thiokol offers promise of helping the Nation through next year's most acute rubber shortage by providing a recap material for tires in essential civilian use—but not for vacation driving.

3. A checkup of the number of tires held as reserves by Federal agencies will be undertaken, following a report—denied by the agency involved,—that one Government agency has a reserve of 11,000 tires to keep its 2000 autos running.

4. Nelson intends to keep "while I am on the job" primary responsibility for procurement of war materials, an intention which he voiced after Senator Truman expressed fear that he might be surrendering some powers to the Army and Navy.

5. The Nation's present ability to produce is limited, Nelson said, "only by our supply of raw materials. It would do your heart good," he said, to see how American industry has responded to the demand for all-out production for war, and the Maritime Commission's production of ships in as little as 46 days is "one of the epics of America."

6. In another three months, the Nation will be past the "hump," of supplying steel to the "pipeline of industry," and then likely "we'll have enough."

7. Half a billion dollars has come back to the Government in recent months through a readjustment of some 25 Army production contracts, and some companies are coming in "of their own accord" to seek adjustments where they find themselves making too much profit.

8. If any firms turn out to be "recalcitrant" about making adjustments, Senator Truman said he would treat them to a public hearing.

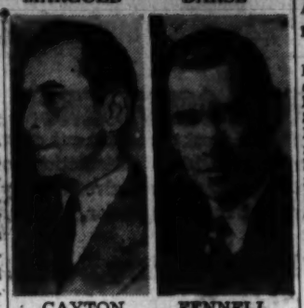
Biographical Sketches of 8 New Judges

Announced yesterday were the nominations by President Roosevelt of eight prominent lawyers for judgeships on the new Municipal Court of Appeals and the Municipal Court.

Below are biographical sketches of these men: William E. Richardson of 2022 Columbia Road Northwest, nominated for chief judge of the three-man Appellate Court; Nathan Cayton, 2948 Macomb Street Northwest, at present on the Municipal bench, and Andrew M. Hood of 1823 Nineteenth Street Northwest, Richardson's associates; for the Municipal Court, George P. Barse of the Westchester Apartments, chief judge; Walter J. Casey, Westchester Apartments, currently on the Police Court bench; Brice Claggett, Landover, Md.; Nathan R. Margold of 2964 Newark Street Northwest, and Aubrey B. Fennell of 1843 Lamont Street Northwest, to be associate judges.

New Municipal Court Judges

CLAGETT CASEY MARGOLD BARSE



CAYTON FENNELL

William E. Richardson

Richardson, the nominee for chief judgeship of the Appellate Court, began the practice of law here in 1902, after his graduation from National and Columbia Universities. He is widely known, is a member of a family which since 1649 has made its home within a 35-mile radius of Washington, and has served the Society of Natives of the District as its president.

He has long been known for his efforts to furnish District natives with "that certain something which natives of the different States seem to have," and in an interview with The Post in 1937 said the Society of Natives advocated "all the attributes of a State for the District. We want a District flag, a flower and a song. We are unanimously for national representation."

In addition to his practice and civic work, he takes an active part in the affairs of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, where he is a member of the vestry.

Nathan Cayton

Judge Cayton was appointed to the present Municipal bench at 28—the youngest "your honor" ever named in the District. Born and reared here, he received a degree from National University when he was hardly 20, began practice when he became 21.

He is the father of the small claims branch of the Municipal Court and the successful advocate of lower court fees in the landlord-tenant and other divisions, and has consistently championed the cause of the poorer classes.

Andrew M. Hood

Hood is a native of Anderson, S. C., but has lived in Washington since 1921, when he came here to study law at Georgetown University. Previously, he attended Erskine College in his home State. He was admitted to the District Bar in 1924 and has engaged in the practice of general civil law since then. A bachelor, he currently is associated with Raymond F. Garrity in the Tower Building and lives at 1823 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

George P. Barse

Barse, who since 1927 has been general counsel for the Bureau of the Comptroller of Currency, Treasury Department, has resided in Washington since early childhood and holds degrees from George Washington University and the National University law school. He was admitted to the District Bar in 1909, engaged in private practice for several years and thereafter became assistant corporation counsel.

He assumed his present position in 1927.

Walter J. Casey

Judge Casey was appointed to the Police Court in 1935, when he was virtually unknown in the local tribunals. A native of Haverhill, Mass., he came to Washington in 1921 as secretary to Ray Baker, director of the Mint. He studied law at Georgetown University and in 1925 resigned his position with the Mint to begin practice.

His most celebrated case, perhaps, was that of Zioncheck, the ill-fated Representative from Washington State.

A member of the Board of Trade, Society of Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, University Club and Delta Theta Phi law fraternity, his greatest desire, he says, is to travel.

Nathan R. Margold

Nathan Margold, 41, has been Interior Department solicitor since 1933, and in 1937 was prominently mentioned as a possible appointee to the Supreme Court under the Roosevelt judicial rejuvenation plan. A native of Manhattan, he was at one time assistant U. S. attorney in New York and took part in the city's famous legal fight for the 5-cent subway fare.

Brice Claggett

Claggett is a native-born Washingtonian who for the past six or seven years has maintained a residence at Landover, Md. Prior to beginning the practice of law here 15 years ago he was for many years a newspaperman, working at various times for The Post, the Star, the old Times, and then for the Associated Press, for which he was for several years White House correspondent during the Wilson Administration. He gave up newspaper work to become secretary to Treasury Secretary W. G. McAdoo.

He is married, has three sons, and since November, 1940, has been chairman of Selective Service Board No. 2 for Prince Georges County.

Aubrey B. Fennell

Another of the nominees, Aubrey B. Fennell, is a native of the District and has resided here all his life.

Fennell is married as has seven children. He has long been active in the affairs of the District Bar Association.

New Municipal Court Judges Nominated by Roosevelt

sible to hold hearings on the nominations earlier than a week after their receipt, which, in this case, assuming the subcommittee is ready to act at the earliest possible moment, would be next Thursday, July 2—a day after the courts were intended to begin functioning. No announcement was immediately forthcoming yesterday as to when the hearings will be held.

The long-delayed nominations, subject to widespread speculation ever since President Roosevelt signed the court-merger bill on April 3, contained several surprises.

Keech, Murray Not Mentioned

Speculation regarding the appellate-court appointments appeared to center about Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and United States District Attorney Charles B. Murray, neither of whom was named. The District Bar Association had urged Richardson's appointment and recommended also that the associate judges be chosen from Keech, Frank H. Myers, Al Philip Kane and Murray, but aside from the nomination of Richardson, the other recommendations fell by the wayside.

The Bar Association urged the nomination of Judge Casey to succeed himself, which was done, and also asked that Judge Cayton, who was nominated to be associate judge of the appellate court, be made chief judge of the Municipal Court.

Other recommendations of the bar association advanced the names of Assistant District Attorney George E. McNeil, T. Gillespie Walsh, James R. Kirkland, Matt Mahorner, John T. Sirica, Bernard G. Ostmann, and Louis B. Arnold for associate judges of the Municipal Court, but all these names were missing when the nominations were made.

Many Were Surprised

Many were surprised by the failure of Alexander Holtzoff of the Justice Department to receive a nomination for the Appellate Court. Many had believed that his nomination was virtually certain.

The nomination of Richardson to be chief judge of the appellate court was described by informed sources as a compromise between backers of Judge Cayton and Casey, each of whose advocates indorsed their man for the chief judgeship. It was this wrangle between the forces backing Cayton-Casey, it was said, which was responsible for the prolonged delay in making the nominations.

The law creating the new courts provided that all judges of the new courts must have practiced law in the District for at least five years. The three judges of the higher court and eight jurists of the lower must have lived in the District for at least five years. Two members of the lower court, according to the law, may reside outside the District.

Ex-Bar Head 'Delighted'

Efforts to reach Paul B. Cromelin, president of the District Bar Association, for comment on the nominations, was not successful last night, but the man whom he succeeded as president, E. Barrett Prettyman, described himself as "delighted" with the president's selection. "I don't know one or two of the men very well, but from what I know of the others I'm very much pleased."

After the new courts begin to function, appeals from the police or municipal branches of the merged Municipal Court will go to the new Municipal Court of Appeals. Before that time, appeals will go to the United States Court of Appeals.

Santa Fe
Time Table Changes
Super Chief·El Capitan
Chicago - Los Angeles
Effective July 7, 1942

At the suggestion of the Office of Defense Transportation, Western Lines have agreed to lengthen the schedules of certain streamlined trains between Chicago and the Pacific Coast by two hours. This arrangement will affect the Santa Fe's bi-weekly streamliners SUPER CHIEF and EL CAPITAN, as follows:

Super Chief

● Effective with departures from Chicago and Los Angeles Tuesday, July 7th, 1942, the Super Chief will operate between those points on a schedule of 41¼ hours. The new time will continue to equal the fastest obtainable rail schedules between Chicago and California.

No. 17 Westbound	The Super Chief Effective July 7, 1942	No. 18 Eastbound
5:30 pm	Lv. Chicago Ar.	1:45 pm
12:45 am	Lv. Kansas City Ar.	5:45 am
9:15 am	Ar. Los Angeles Lv.	6:00 pm

● Days of departure will be unchanged: from Chicago, Tuesdays and Saturdays, arriving Los Angeles Thursdays and Mondays; from Los Angeles, Tuesdays and Fridays, arriving Chicago Thursdays and Sundays.

Use Tuesday Departures, If You Can

● There is invariably greater demand for space on the Super Chief leaving Chicago Saturday and Los Angeles Friday.

Therefore, if you contemplate using the Super Chief, we urge you to plan a Tuesday departure, if you can do so without interference with essential business. In this way you can help us spread the load, serve you better individually, and render maximum wartime service to all.

● A recent survey showed 74.8% of Super Chief passengers traveling on military or civilian business.

El Capitan

● El Capitan, twice-a-week all-chair-car streamlined train, will operate between Chicago and Los Angeles on the same days of the week and the same elapsed time, 41¼ hours, as the Super Chief, as follows:

No. 21 Westbound	El Capitan Effective July 7, 1942	No. 22 Eastbound
5:45 pm	Lv. Chicago Ar.	7:15 am
12:57 am	Lv. Kansas City Ar.	11:13 pm
9:30 am	Ar. Los Angeles Lv.	11:30 am

The Chief

● No change at terminals. The Chief will continue to be the fastest daily train between Chicago and California.

No. 19 Westbound	The Chief Effective July 5, 1942	No. 20 Eastbound
12:01 pm	Lv. Chicago Ar.	1:25 pm
10:10 pm	Lv. Kansas City Ar.	3:55 am
11:50 am	Ar. Los Angeles Lv.	12:01 pm

Other Transcontinental Service

● Other famous daily Santa Fe trains between Chicago and California—the California Limited, the Grand Canyon Limited, and the Scout—will continue uninterrupted operation. Such minor changes in their present schedules as are deemed necessary to meet existing travel conditions will become effective with departures from Chicago and California points on Sunday, July 5th, 1942.

Let's All Pull Together

★ Increasingly, under war conditions, the railroads must furnish mass transportation, military and civilian, for the nation. The load is already great—and growing steadily ★ Military movements come first, without question. You can help us maintain adequate rail service for civilian travel as well, in these ways: Make reservations and buy tickets early. Cancel reservations promptly, if necessary. Spread the load by avoiding week-end and holiday rush periods

Sales Tax to Bolster Revenue Bill Studied

Need for Another 2½ Billions Revives Talk of Retail Levy in House Committee

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A direct bid to the House to bring the undersized tax bill up to the Administration's $8,700,000,000 "par" last night was being considered by House advocates of a Federal retail sales tax.

Sales tax proposals were rejected by the House Ways and Means Committee after Treasury opposition, but a drive gathered way last night to revive them to pump another two and a half billion dollars into the bill.

One plan called for a 5 per cent retail levy on all items except Government purchases, to make up the bulk of the shortage in the $5,924,000,000 bill. The main contest may come this time in the House Rules Committee, which has authority to say whether the bill can be opened to proposals for new revenue.

General Disappointment

Disappointment with the bill's revenue content meanwhile was voiced generally in the corridors, and strong independent sentiment was apparent for a rule opening the bill to other revenue-producing amendments.

One member of the committee said the rule could be phrased to bar separate votes on taxes already embraced in the measure, but to permit tapping of new sources to raise revenue.

Under such a rule, it was pointed out, the House might have not only an opportunity to consider a sales tax but could also revive if it chose the controversial provision for mandatory joint income tax returns. The latter proposal was defeated in committee, at the price of 420 million dollars in lost revenue.

The Ways and Means Committee itself has another shot at the measure when it meets to consider the finished draft, around July 7. Eleventh hour proposals to raise revenue may be considered at that point, and it was believed likely the Treasury might have further suggestions to make. While the Administration is averse to the sales tax, it has already recommended higher individual and corporation surtaxes than those accepted by the committee.

As tentatively completed by the committee on Wednesday, the bill falls $3,776,000,000 short of the revenue recommended by the Treasury. The "effective" revenue shortage is greater—$3,652,700,000—if allowance is made for excess profits refunds to corporations after the war.

Meanwhile it was learned that both Treasury and Ways and Means Committee experts are seriously considering substitution of 5 per cent income tax collections from pay checks next year for the 10 per cent "withholdings" proposed in the bill.

Half as Tax Deduction

Under the plan adopted by the committee, 10 per cent would be taken for taxes out of pay checks beginning next January, but half of this would be allowed as a tax deduction in the following year to prevent "doubling up" of 1942 and 1943 taxes when the "pay-as-you-go" plan takes effect. The plan was to spread extra payments over two years to ease the transition from present methods to "collection at the source."

Morgenthau told reporters he understood the Ways and Means Committee was considering a modified plan, to collect only 5 per cent of taxes at the source next year, and delay 10 per cent collections until 1944. Both plans would yield the same net total of taxes, but less would be collected directly from pay checks in the first year.

Following Morgenthau's conference, Chairman Doughton conferred with Treasury officials late in the day and released a statement prepared by the Treasury explaining the latest proposal.

"In the course of the discussion in the committee," the statement read in part, "it was suggested by a member of the committee that a simpler method of transition would be to withhold at a rate of only 5 per cent in 1943 and have all of the withheld tax apply as part payment of 1943 tax liabilities. The 10 per cent rate would be imposed first in 1944, applicable as part payment of 1944 tax liabilities. It was informally the sense of the committee that the Treasury and joint committee staffs should study this suggestion and report back to the committee for its consideration before the bill is reported. It is understood that this study is being made."

Morgenthau declined comment on the tax decisions of the committee, indicating that so many changes might occur in the measure before it reaches final enactment it would be premature for him to comment. He expressed regret, however, at the committee rejection of the plan to require married couples to file joint tax returns.

Tough Job

Army Begins Selecting Waacs Today

If you happen to know any of the 18 women coming to Washington tomorrow to help Director Oveta Culp Hobby and Regular Army officers begin selecting 1100 officer candidates for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, please keep it quiet.

The War Department wants no "high pressuring"—and even after raising the number of prospective candidates from 450 to 1100—knows that picking the "WAAC's" is one of the toughest jobs the Army ever has faced.

As a "protection" to the visiting women, two from each of the Army corps areas, names of none will be released until the selecting is finished. That probably will be the latter part of next week.

Its a wealth of possible selections and not a scarcity of good material that will keep the reviewing board worried until all candidates finally are named. They started out with more than 50,000 and still have thousands left after all the mental alertness and physical tests the War Department could think up.

First of the lucky candidates will start going to school at Fort Des Moines on July 20. The others will be "fed in" in relays.

A "dean of women" for the school will be announced some time today, the War Department said yesterday

Deficiency Bill Adds $98,141 To D. C. Funds

Funds totaling $98,141 were voted to the District yesterday as the Senate passed the House-approved second deficiency bill for 1942.

In addition to this appropriation, which is to cover local deficits dating from the current fiscal year back to 1939, a grant of $103,000 was voted in the bill to the Federal Security Agency as deficit financing for St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Chief item in the District fund is a $75,046 allotment to the water service of 1942 operation of the Washington Aqueduct. Other agencies receiving funds include the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, $1296; the Board of Public Welfare, $7629, and the Health Department, $6429.

Only change made in the District allotments by the Senate was a $1250 increase in House-approved funds earmarked for the settlement of claims and suits pending against the city. The bill also provides $3097 for the payment of final judgments and $196 for the disposition of audited claims.

The Senate is scheduled to act today on the Labor-Federal Security appropriation, which includes a total of $3,027,610 slated for use in the District. The money is to be used for Freedmen's Hospital, St. Elizabeths Hospital, the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Howard University and by the FSA for vocational rehabilitation of disabled Washington residents.

Los Angeles, June 2 (AP).—Guy O. Bryan, chain store dealer convicted of selling tires in violation of rationing regulations, was fined $3000 today and placed on probation, provided he pays. If he defaults the fine, Federal Judge J. F. T. O'Connor said, he must serve a year in jail.

Senor Ortiz

Had Senor Ortiz been the active head of the Argentine government, it is probable that Argentina's role at the Rio conference and later would have been more in line with the wishes of the great majority of the American republics and the Argentine people. Senor Ortiz, who has just resigned the Presidency on the ground of illness, never has made any bones about his prodemocratic and anti-Axis sympathies. But he has been ill for two years. In his place Acting President Castillo, who now becomes chief executive in name as well as fact, has followed the policy of "prudent neutrality." And this has meant that while Argentina gives the United States special rights, the Axis missions at Buenos Aires are allowed to stay on.

Argentine public opinion has never taken kindly to President Castillo's policy and in recent days has been increasingly critical of it. Despite his own inclinations, therefore, the Argentine chief executive is now confronted by the necessity of revising the policy to which he has clung with such determination. The attack by a German submarine on an Argentine vessel was followed by a strong note to Berlin. It resulted in an apology by the Third Reich and a promise that such attacks would not be repeated. The ink was hardly dry on this document, however, before an Argentine vessel, the Rio Tercero, was sent to the bottom by a Nazi torpedo. This has so embittered the Argentine people that strong guards have had to be posted around the German Embassy.

Certainly Argentina cannot accept this affront to her honor and her interests lying down. In similar circumstances Mexico declared war on the Axis. Castillo, hesitating to admit that his policy has been wrong and unwise, may hesitate to go that far. But it is difficult to see how, under the circumstances, he can continue to maintain the pretense that Germany and her partners are "friendly" countries. They are, as a great majority of Argentinians clearly recognize and do not hesitate to proclaim, enemies of the independence of every free nation, including Argentina.

Tax Bill

At last the Ways and Means Committee has completed the formulation of a tax program for House consideration. It will be the largest single tax bill in our history. Yet the estimated revenue, amounting to $5,900,000,000, falls far short of the $8,700,000,000 requested by the Treasury. There were two surprise moves at the last moment. One was a last-minute elimination of the provision calling for mandatory joint returns of income by married couples. This is expected to cut $420,000,000 from revenue returns. Another was the committee's sudden decision to return 14 per cent of a corporation's excess profits when the war is over. This proposal is in accord with a suggestion of Donald Nelson either to modify the drastic 94 per cent tax on corporate excess profits, or else to return all payments above the 80 per cent level after the war. Meantime the corporate taxpayer would be given credits in the form of bonds for the amounts to be returned. These bonds would bear no interest, could not be sold until after the war, and would then be payable in installments.

The refund plan has two marked advantages over the committee's original drastic proposal: first, it would give the corporate taxpayer some incentive to operate efficiently and economically, whereas a 94 per cent tax is so high that it would almost certainly result in loss of efficiency and lead to waste. The other advantage of the refund is that it would build up corporate reserves at an estimated rate of nearly one billion dollars annually, which could be used after the war for financing the reconversion of industry to peacetime pursuits.

The Ways and Means Committee should be commended for its action in mitigating the severity of the corporate tax schedules. Nevertheless, to repeat, the tax program as a whole falls far short of revenue needs. That shortage could be made good with comparative ease by voting a general sales tax. The inadequate alternative which the committee has agreed upon calls for increases in selective excise taxes. Such excise taxes would bear heavily upon a limited number of industries, would not produce anywhere near the amount of revenue needed and, above all, would not have the repressive effect upon consumer spending required to fight inflation.

Step Toward Democracy

"At a time when we are risking our national existence to defend the principle of democracy," Representative Paddock told the House yesterday, "more than eight hundred thousand residents of Washington have no voice whatever in their Government." That anomaly has become even more galling in wartime than it was in time of peace. For Washington men are shedding their blood in defense of freedom along with full-fledged citizens from the States. To deny them all rights of participating in the democratic process for which they are fighting is to weaken our own cause at the very headquarters of the United Nations.

The significant factor about Mr. Paddock's speech of yesterday, however, is that he points the way toward an immediate restoration of the ballot box in the District. By a simple act of Congress this voteless city could once more be given the right of electing a delegate to Congress. The District had a delegate in the House from 1871 to 1874. Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico have delegates there now. There can be no excuse whatever for denial of this minor privilege to the National Capital.

Mr. Paddock is right in saying that an elected but voteless delegate in the House will not satisfy the demands of this rapidly growing community for full participation in the American political system. But he sees no prospect of Congress taking the necessary time to reorganize the local government during the war. And the Senate Judiciary Committee, not many months ago, turned thumbs down on the Sumners-Capper resolution designed to give the District full representation in Congress through a constitutional amendment. In the circumstances the election of a delegate appears to be the most practical step toward improvement of the local government that can be taken at this time.

Such an official would relieve Congress of many wearying details connected with governing the District. He would be a ready source of information regarding the city and its needs, and he could keep Congress more accurately informed about local problems than it has ever been in the past. Far more important, however, is the probability that the election of such a delegate would weld this disfranchised community into a political entity once more. The delegate would become the spearhead of movements not only to relieve the city of scandalous conditions but also to improve the local government and widen voting rights.

The Post has long advocated the election of a District delegate as a step toward restoration of the political rights that were so recklessly abolished in 1874. We think that Mr. Paddock has rendered a national as well as local service by raising the issue at this time. His proposal would constitute a small step forward. But a community that has been voteless and neglected for 68 years cannot be indifferent toward small steps in the direction of democratic government. Washington would be well advised to rally its united civic support behind this constructive suggestion.

Undermining Henderson

The Office of Price Administration under Leon Henderson was created by Congress. So Congress presumably wants Mr. Henderson to do a good job of enforcing the executive orders issued under the sweeping powers conferred upon him. Nevertheless a House appropriations subcommittee has voted less than half the sum which Mr. Henderson requested for his agency. Furthermore, no provision has been made in the appropriations bill for subsidy payments that the OPA must have to keep hard-pressed industries operating under official price ceilings. Finally, well authenticated rumors indicate that some of Mr. Henderson's appointments have aroused the ire of congressional spoilsmen.

If the House subcommittee has its way, Mr. Henderson will be able to employ just about one-third of the 90,000 persons considered essential for enforcement purposes. We don't pretend to know how large the OPA's working force ought to be. But we do know that the enforcement task confronting Mr. Henderson is stupendous. It is a job, too, that cannot be delegated altogether to volunteer workers and self-appointed snoopers. There must be a strong nucleus of highly trained, competent officials to interpret price orders, sift complaints, and track down violators of price decrees. Indeed, the drastic reduction in funds allotted to the OPA is equivalent to a vote of no confidence in Mr. Henderson's ability to determine his own personnel needs.

It cannot be said too strongly that Mr. Henderson must have moral as well as adequate financial support from Congress in order to carry through his price-control program. Otherwise it will be almost impossible to secure cooperation from the public in the enforcement of price edicts. And public cooperation is unqualifiedly essential to success. Even a locust swarm of paid agents could not cope with the countless evasions of price orders that would be attempted if public opinion were not solidly behind the Price Administrator.

As Mr. Henderson has said, it is not the bureaucrats but the retailers and consumers who will suffer most from a failure to curb inflation. Consumers generally realize that fact. But not all retailers understand that they, too, have a tremendous stake in keeping prices from getting out of control. Inflation means a collapse of all monetary standards, store shelves cleaned out by panic runs, replacements uncertain, profits disappearing in process of being realized, and bankruptcy in the midst of spurious affluence. To avert such catastrophes Congress can well afford to spend some money for essential staffing of the OPA.

Rommel's Chances

What must we now expect from Marshal Rommel? The capture of Tobruk has given him a small but excellent harbor several hundreds of miles east of Bengazi, hitherto the principal Axis transshipment point in Libya, as well as stores of gasoline and other materiel he can use in his attack on the British positions in western Egypt. Furthermore, his present strength in tanks is probably greater, as his strength in artillery is undoubtedly greater, than that of the British. On the other hand, despite the capture of Tobruk; his supply problem is likely to become more and more difficult the farther east he moves. His losses of materiel, moreover, have made him weaker rather than stronger than he was when he launched his offensive against the British Eighth Army. And, finally, he has still to contend with the Royal Air Force, which gave a good account of itself in the recent fighting and is now being reinforced by an increasing number of heavy American bombers. Since Rommel is too shrewd a tactician deliberately to stick his neck out unless the chances of victory are good he may, willy-nilly, have to move slowly, and thus give the British the time they so desperately need.

Despite the disaster of Tobruk—a disaster it serves no good purpose to minimize—it is too early to despair of the fate of Egypt. Rommel still has a hard row to hoe before he can reach Alexandria and Suez. He is not at the end, but at the beginning, of his troubles. Yet the fighting of the past month has revealed that he is a consummate master of desert warfare. British generalship in that campaign, on the contrary, proved itself to be anything but brilliant. It was timid where it should have been bold; it was clogged by the defense complex which seemed to have seized Cairo, where the chief question asked was always "Where will Rommel strike next?" And the commander in chief appears to have been surrounded by leftovers and brass hats who long ago were slated for the axe; and apparently, there was the old misunderstanding between the man on the spot and the higher strategists at home. There may not be time for the shake-up in the British command in Egypt that the British are demanding, but the weak spots must be corrected, for Egypt is too vital a strategic point to be allowed to go by default.

Meaney Case

By an 11-to-5 vote the Senate Judiciary Committee has brought discredit upon itself by reporting favorably on the nomination of Thomas F. Meaney for a Federal District judgeship. Debate over the appointment appears to have centered about the alleged misconduct of Mr. Meaney while acting as liquidator of a New Jersey financial institution. Since Mr. Meaney is the choice of Mayor Hague of New Jersey for the judgeship to which President Roosevelt has obligingly appointed him, it seems unnecessary to spend time probing into the candidate's past life. His mere connection with a notorious political machine should automatically disqualify him for the high office to which he aspires.

Senator Van Nuys, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who voted against the Meaney appointment, put the case against the candidate very simply, yet forcibly. "I am certain," he said, "that out of the great State of New Jersey a name could have been sent down here that would not have provoked the controversy which we have gone through for several weeks." He added significantly: "The judiciary must be kept honest or democracy will fail." In effect this is an appeal for selecting as candidates for judgeships only men who are in all respects above suspicion or reproach—men whose personal integrity would never be seriously questioned. The supposed advantage of subjecting appointees for high office to Senatorial scrutiny is that rejections need not be based on evidence of definite wrongdoing. Intangible tests of suitability are often a much better measure of a man's fitness for responsible positions.

RAINY DAY

It rains today; the team and I rest
From our work.. This is a day of dreams
In the weathered barn while the rain
Sings on the roof, and the horses,
Temples throbbing, munch on new-mown hay,
Succulent and full of the sweetness
Of June. High on the rafters swallows
Feed their young; wisps of hay
Which have caught on the beams swing
In the wind. I have time now to live
In dreams the summer days, time to store
Into my heart the harvest of the fields.

Odell Waller

May I comment briefly on certain points raised by your editorial of June 20 on the case of Odell Waller?

The evidence introduced at Waller's trial to prove that he "was a bad man with a bad record" is not altogether convincing. It was given by a county policeman, of whose testimony such statements as these are typical: "All in the community, white and colored, says he's bad;" "The people down there told me he was a mean nigger;" "He's been in jail several times!" He said that Waller had engaged in bootlegging and had driven without a permit. His only serious accusation was that Waller had once pulled a razor on him—a statement which the judge ruled out on direct examination and admitted on cross-examination.

You state that the only thing in question is whether or not Waller's killing of Oscar Davis was premeditated. A reading of the trial record would, I believe, convince you that the circumstances of the shooting itself are still open to question. The only eyewitness was a Negro boy of 18, who was in Oscar Davis' employ at the time of the shooting and in that of Davis' son at the time of the trial. It shows also that he had refused to talk to Waller's counsel, saying that he would tell everything at the trial, if he could remember it; that his testimony differed in important respects from that which he had given two weeks earlier in Trial Justice Court, and that he testified that Waller had shot Davis with absolutely no reason after a friendly conversation during which Davis promised him his wheat. Surely no unprejudiced person could deny that the circumstances and nature of this boy's testimony lay it open to grave doubt.

And if this testimony is open to doubt, then the question whether Waller shot in self-defense is also open to doubt. He testified that he did not see a gun in Davis' hand, but that Davis ran his hand into a pocket where he had known him to carry a gun, and he was afraid Davis was going to shoot. It appears that fear of a gun one does not actually see can be sufficient ground for acquittal on a plea of self-defense; for a year later a white farmer, R. G. Siddle, who killed an unarmed Negro sharecropper, was acquitted on substantially identical testimony in the court where Waller was convicted.

Finally, you state that there was no objection at the time that the jury in the Waller case was not a jury of representative citizens. The record shows that Waller's counsel moved to quash the indictment and the petit jury panel on the ground that nonpayers of poll taxes had been systematically excluded from both. But he failed to adduce specific proof, assuming that the law of Virginia then required such exclusion. This point, it appears, had not then been decided by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Had it been the law, proof of the fact of exclusion would of course have been unnecessary. Not until the Supreme Court of Appeals dismissed Waller's writ of error was it held that the law of Virginia did not require such exclusion. Thereupon the Supreme Court of Appeals refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus to permit Waller to prove the undoubted facts. It is apparently the failure of his trial counsel to produce specific proof in support of his motions that has made it impossible for Waller's present counsel to get a review of his case by the Federal Courts.

British Soldiers

Considering the bravery and valor, the suffering and sacrifice and steadfastness, which the people of England have shown from the outbreak of the war, it becomes no man, especially no American, to criticize them. But it is an inexorable fact that an army and its country pay on the nail in blood and suffering and misery for the mistakes of its commanders. Which is why it is proper now to recall what Thomas Carlyle wrote of the English army as it was organized in the year 1740.

He said: "As to the English army, we may say it is, in a wrong sense, the wonder of the world, and continues so throughout the whole of this history and farther. Never before, among the rational sons of Adam, were armies sent out on such terms—namely, without a general, or with no general understanding the least of his business. The English have a notion that generalship is not wanted; that war is not an art, as playing chess is, as doing the differential calculus is (and a much deeper art than any of these); that war is taught by nature as eating is; that courageous soldiers, led on by a courageous wooden pole with a cocked hat on it, will do very well. In this world I have not found opacity of platitude go deeper among any people." ("Frederick the Great," volume IV, page 331.)

I have no personal knowledge of today's English army, but I served beside it in 1918, and, at that time, the courageous wooden poles had not been wholly eliminated. Its men were then, as they have always been, brave and unafraid soldiers.

A lot of our boys are going to be killed and maimed. We know that, expect it, and are resigned to it. But we have more than the right—we are charged with the sacred duty—to assure ourselves that the blood they shed will be shed to good purpose; that the loss of every life is more than compensated by loss to the enemy. No doubt the people of England, too, are precisely of that opinion. It is not possible, in advance, to find the best men as commanders, but it is possible to oust any commander the minute he has shown unfitness.

Salvage Problem

Is waste paper being salvaged in the District or is it not? I have concientiously saved up old newspapers, envelopes, cardboard, boxes, tissue wrappings, and what-have-you. The District of Columbia Salvage Committee is not interested in these, as their warehouses are full; the Good Will Industries are no longer interested; and the one interested junk dealer advises me to wait until my pile of papers is 15 feet high.

It seems to me that if the collection of clean waste paper is of any value at all, the District should inaugurate some system by which these papers should be collected. When the public schools were open, they did a tolerable job.

Seriously, there must be other housewives who are tired of making half-a-dozen phone calls and a major effort in order to get out of the house the stack of old papers they have been asked to save.

Busman's Headaches

In reading the letters in yesterday's issue of The Post I could not help noticing the unfair attitude adopted by some of your writers.

As a former bus operator, I feel qualified to write a rebuttal to their offerings to your column.

Admitting that there are a large number of buses involved in accidents. But, where are there so large a number of large vehicles engaged in business that makes it necessary to be where traffic is the greatest other than the buses?

I would venture to say, in answer to one remark, that 90 per cent of the bus operators are more efficient than the rest of the drivers of vehicles. They know their job and are doing their best to maintain a schedule and be of service to Mr. and Mrs. John Public.

Now letter writers who claim to be regular patrons of the buses, do you cooperate with the bus operator? Are you one of the few who go at once to the rear of the bus? Or by chance are you one of those many who have to be either coaxed or pushed to make you take one step to the rear? Are you one of the few who always have the fare ready? Stop and think and consider what the operator has to contend with in catering to Mr. and Mrs. John Public.

Also remember that a great number of passengers are strangers in this town and insist that the bus operator be as information bureau also.

Now why don't you, instead of complaining, do what you can to help the operator to speed the service instead of voicing your unnecessary complaints. Remember he might be a new man and you would not expect some stranger to come in and do your job as well as you.

Our Rubber Stock

In the general hullabaloo as to whether gas rationing should or should not be on a Nationwide scale, one very important factor seems to have been overlooked by many people who theoretically should know better, including a few newspaper editors and a number of Congressmen. I refer to one of the most important objectives of gas rationing—the saving of precious rubber in the tires of over 32 million cars.

It is, of course, elementary that there is no scarcity of either petroleum or refinery facilities, and that the petroleum shortage in the Eastern States is due to a lack of sufficient transportation facilities. But the use of gasoline to drive an automobile means the use of rubber tires at the same time. The source of over 95 per cent of our crude rubber has been shut off, and it will be several years before a substitute crude rubber supply or synthetic rubber even approaches our peacetime needs. We must therefore conserve our existing rubber stock.

Nationwide rationing of gasoline means cutting down nonessential uses of rubber and saving our present supplies for the more important war-time uses.

As a vital national industry the shipping interests deserve recognition as far as working conditions are concerned.

Working conditions (food, hours, pay, etc.), due to the organizing efforts of the National Maritime Union (C. I. O. affiliate), are now on a par with other union activities.

The Post Impressionist

Missing Reporter

The last time we saw him was in New York. It was a party in his dingy, hard-to-find, Greenwich Village apartment, celebrating his new found freedom. He had resigned his China Relief publicity job. He was through with New York. He was going to Oregon and work on a novel.

We met Bill Hipple in the fall of 1935. It was the first Fraternity dance of the year. Washington still carried vestiges of summer with the result that it was cooler to sit on the side lines and watch the others swelter. I heard a voice behind me:

"Let's get out of here and have a beer!"

He was tall, with blond-red hair. Lines were already cutting into a very angular face. His shoulders were slightly stooped as he stood facing the dance floor with apparent boredom.

We had the beer. As a matter of fact we had several. This was Bill's first night in Washington. He was still tanned from a trip to Alaska in a fishing boat. It was this trip which led from one beer to another. In the smoke-palled booth of the little restaurant we travelled the world, talked of things to do and places to see. And, by gad, we would see them.

The dance had long since ended by the time we returned.

Bill was a newspaper man even then. He had walked a reporter's beat for a small paper in Tacoma, Wash., until the urge to see Alaska made him chuck the job. After that junket, for some reason, he decided to come to Washington. He enrolled late for the fall term at George Washington University and began looking around for a job on the side.

He found one—selling men's shirts in an F Street clothing store. "Not very exciting," he'd say, "but it'll pay for board and tuition until I find a better job."

After two weeks of shirt selling he found a better one with a news service. Almost at once he was knuckle deep in his typewriter, pounding out Capital news. College seemed dull and drab, so Bill cut classes permanently.

About once a week we'd meet at the "Ivory Tower." That was what he called his attic room. It was a house on Nineteenth Street, with ivy running up to the eves. There, long after the town had gone to bed, we'd sip red wine and talk.

We were still going to see those places we were talking about.

Then we stopped talking and started to save money. We had also picked up a third recruit, Dick Coe, whose by-line was later to become familiar on the theater pages of The Washington Post. No dates, no movies, no beers. Through this Spartan existence, by May, 1937, we proudly showed to those interested passports, travelers checks and tickets on the Berengaria to Southampton, England.

Bill, who decided a regular pay check would enhance his stay in England, had talked his office into sending him to London provided he paid his own expenses across. This was agreeable, but meant that he couldn't sail with us. He'd have to take the Queen Mary two weeks later.

Dick and I were at Waterloo Station early. After an interminable wait the Queen Mary's passengers began streaming through the gates. But no Bill Hipple. Something had gone wrong. We chucked our plans for a party, sent a letter to Bill in New York and caught a bus for Penzance. The letter explained that we were off on a hiking tour of England and Scotland, and would return to London within two months. We would look for a message from him at the American Express and then go on to Paris.

Two month's later we were back in London. Our first objective was the American Express office. Once there, we thumbed through the visitor's register, hoping to see the name and address of Hipple scrawled in bold ink. No Hipple.

Several days later we were in Paris.

"Any mail for Burton?" I asked the American Express man.

He handed me a postcard. It had a British stamp and bore the cryptic message:

"London fine. Sorry I missed you. Forgot to sign the visitor's book. Your letter sent to New York was returned to me here. See you in Paris next week-end.—Hip."

The "week-end" turned into four days of hectic rambling around the streets and cafes of Paris before we finally parted. Dick and I going on to Egypt and Bill returning to London.

It was not until the following spring in Washington that I next saw Bill.

I was rather forcibly awakened one morning by someone jerking my foot.

"Got any shaving cream?"

It was Hipple back from London.

He soon grew restless in Washington and moved on to radio and publicity jobs in New York.

"I'm tired of New York," he said, at the party that night, "I'm going to Oregon to work on a novel."

That's the last we've seen of Bill. Reports drifted in. He's working on a paper in Texas . . . publicity in Hollywood . . . a good movie script writing job. But nothing definite.

Then yesterday's mail brought a letter from Dick, who is now in the Army. With the letter was a newspaper clipping:

"WRITER TELLS HOW U. S. RAID BLASTED SHIPS AT NEW GUINEA
by William Hipple

Staff writer aboard a warship with the U. S. Pacific Fleet . . ."

Here's to you, Bill, and the "Tower." See you somewhere, sometime. . ."

EARL BURTON

Political Stalling

By Ernest Lindley

Congress 'Insults' Citizen-Intelligence

THE FALL ELECTION is more than four months away. But, week by week, it is affecting, for the worse, the present national effort.

LINDLEY

The trend is plain. It is to stall until after election actions which should be taken now, and in some cases are long overdue.

The tax program is one example. It now appears unlikely that the new tax bill will become law before the election—perhaps a full year after Pearl Harbor. And no one can be assured that even then it will be commensurate with the need. The record to date is not encouraging. The Treasury began with a halfway program, and the House Ways and Means Committee has cut it down without correcting, in substantial degree, its lack of balance.

Subsidies are required if the all-over price ceiling is not to be punctured. Manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers cannot all operate under some of the ceilings. They are too low for present costs of production. Either there must be subsidies, or certain ceilings must be lifted. It is debatable which method of relief should be applied. But Leon Henderson and his aides fear the whole ceiling will be ripped open if many changes are made. And when the price ceilings rise, questions of wage levels and farm parity are reopened,—and the spiral of inflation again threatens.

NATION-WIDE gasoline rationing is stalled. Some little time ago, all the high officials chiefly responsible for the conduct of the war were agreed that rubber on the road must be stringently conserved. And no one has suggested any way of assuring that it is conserved except by gasoline rationing. A great majority of car-owners can be relied upon to cooperate in a voluntary plan of conservation — provided the need is convincingly explained to them. But there are always fringes of thoughtless people or chiselers. It is not fair to the majority to permit the minority to use their tires without restraint.

Every day that goes by, rubber that cannot be replaced on civilian automobiles for at least two years to come is being used up. The reasons that we don't have Nation-wide gasoline rationing today are almost entirely political: the fear that the public will resent it and vent its resentment at the polls. If the decision is to try voluntary self-rationing first, then the campaign should not be delayed. Generalized requests to people to cut down their driving are not enough: they do not convey the idea of the seriousness of the rubber shortage.

THE PRESIDENT'S anti-inflation program as a whole is in danger of going to pieces. Henderson has been holding the line, almost alone, but he cannot continue to do so without help, including subsidies. But instead of help he is getting from Congress the attacks of the patronage-grabbers, who are inflamed because Henderson has appointed to office Republicans, or others not chosen by Senators or ranking Congressmen.

While he is standing up to the politicans, Henderson is not getting the open support from the Administration which he should have. For it is not enough for him to stand up. He needs Congressional approval of appropriations for two purposes: subsidies and administrative expenses for the OPA. He can get at least some of the money for administrative expenses, but the price exacted in return may be the impairment of public confidence in OPA and of its efficiency through the intrusion of political patronage.

If the war, and its effects on our national economy, could be frozen until after the election, no harm would come from this revival of politics-as-usual. A number of Senators and Representatives seem to think they have done all that is required of them when they vote appropriations for the fighting services. These votes are only a thin screen for those who hampered the defense effort before Pearl Harbor and those who are neglecting or endangering the security of the Nation now, both on the economic front and, in such cases as rubber conservation, perhaps in the military sense as well.

Week by week these men are being guided in their actions by the belief that their constituents are not ready to do and to give what it takes to win the war and also to keep their economic life on as even a keel as the war will permit. This is insulting to the intelligence, as well as to the patriotic feeling, of the average citizen. For even if there were no such thing as patriotism, sensible self-interest would dictate approval of the measures which Congress, and to some extent the Administration, is shying away from.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Union Slush Funds

THE TEAMSTERS' union of the A. F. L. recently announced a decision by its executive board, the governing body of 650,000 men and women, which is important to all of us, for it has the sound of a threat to buy the election to Congress of men whom it favors and buy the defeat of men who have earned its enmity by voting and debating against racketeering and other abusive practices of unions. The announcement said the board authorized Dan Tobin, the president, to "spend as much money as is necessary to acquaint the public, and especially labor, with the records of certain Congressmen." That is a neat way of putting a sinister purpose. The locals which make up and support the international, or parent union, which has made this decision at the conservative rate of $30 a year per member, have an income of around 20 million dollars, and the parent body, itself, gets around three million dollars from one source or another. Of course, this is not the only union which will spend a great slush fund in this campaign. Many others will do likewise, and all of them are, by the plain statement of Francis Biddle, the Attorney General, political subsidiaries of the party in power. Altogether they have a total income of more than a thousand millions a year, to say nothing of many millions of accumulated wealth which can be slushed into the campaign.

Three of the men singled out for defeat by the teamsters are Howard Smith of Virginia, Clare Hoffman of Michigan and Carl Vinson of Georgia. Smith is condemned because he conducted investigations of racketeering by unions and unioneers and offered legislation to forbid certain corrupt union practices which are too notorious to need explanation here.

Hoffman saw the invasion of Michigan by terrorists under the auspices of the C. I. O. Auto Workers' Union and, in debate with Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, fought for a provision which would have outlawed the importation of rioters from one State to another, just as the importation of strikebreakers is forbidden. Vinson reported on union income and some union activities in the war program in a way which antagonized the professional politicians and tax collectors of this great American subgovernment.

A SPOKESMAN for the teamsters said the campaign probably would be directed against "a majority of the Republicans in Congress because most of them have voted consistently against labor." He also said that they had voted against President Roosevelt and against national defense. But this only amounts to saying that they are not members of the party in power which now goes into this campaign to buy up Congressmen in the manner of Huey Long with Louisiana State Legislators, of whom he said he bought and sold them like sacks of potatoes.

Of course, the Teamsters' Union does not speak for labor or even for all its members. Politically it has no right to speak at all, because membership is to a large extent compulsory and men and women are forced to pay money into the international treasury which is then used to buy the election of the members of the legislative branch of the Government.

The phrase "to acquaint the public, and especially labor, with the record of certain Congressmen" has a legitimate sound. There is nothing wrong about the publication of information. But, of course, the information will be biased and angled, and the effect of the campaign will be paid political propaganda which the New Deal Party itself, through the State and Justice Departments, has officially recognized as having subversive possibilities.

The Government took steps against the propaganda agencies of foreign governments, now our enemies, in frank recognition of the fact that paid propaganda may be dangerous to the American form of government. We have also put a stop to "acquaint the public" with certain issues and have even "investigated" some groups, but never any unions, as punishment for having dared to "acquaint the public" with this or that side of certain political matters.

SLUSH FUNDS need not be used for the crude purpose of buying votes on the hoof, singly or by the herd. Slush funds are much more effective when spent to "acquaint the public," and this year the unions are so rich and boldly contemptuous of the purity of elections that they are nearly all prepared to "spend as much money as is necessary."

If they succeed they will own the lower House of Congress, body and soul, just as they now own the Senate and the Department of Justice, and the people will have to look to their State Legislatures for laws to put down racketeering, union rioting and all other offenses against honesty and government for which so many of them are notorious.

After Rubber Salvage

By Mark Sullivan

Saving Crude And Producing Synthetic

THE DRIVE for scrap rubber will end next Tuesday, June 30. Estimates of the amount that will be got engage the serious attention of officials at Washington, who will be guided as to the future steps that will be necessary. The total for the first six days is just over 100,000 tons. For the whole 14 days of the drive, a total of 200,000 tons may be a reasonable guess.

SULLIVAN

To worried officials, these figures have a meaning. For the enlightment of citizens, who will be affected, it may be said that 200,000 tons is about a third of the rubber the country uses in a normal, peacetime year. For the wartime year, or years, ahead, when much rubber will be needed for the military services of ourselves and our Allies, the results of the present drive will be, perhaps, one-sixth of the total need, or even a smaller fraction. This means that as soon as the present drive is finished, other steps must be taken.

A clew to one step may be found by examining the figures of the present drive. The average scrap received from each individual, so far, is about 1½ pounds per person. These figures are extreme, but other farm States have been relatively high, from 2 to 4 pounds per person. Farms have attics and cellars, and barns and outhouses, in which things accumulate. Also, farms have more rubber in use—an average farm may have an automobile, a truck, and a tractor.

LET US estimate something like this: A farm may yield 20 pounds of scrap rubber to the present drive—but the same farm may have 200 pounds, or more, in active use. For city families, the proportion may be much the same—say 5 pounds of scrap for the drive, but 50 pounds or more in use on the family car. The reasonable, and important, deduction is there is five times as much rubber in active use as there is scrap. The really large store of rubber in the United States is that which is on the country's automobiles and trucks and tractors. It is larger than all the other stores combined, larger than the stocks of new rubber in warehouses, plus all the scrap.

Herein is an important lesson. You have turned in your scrap rubber, and thereby have done a useful service. That particular service you cannot repeat. But you can do an equivalent service by practicing a comparatively small saving of the rubber in active use. Travel 40 miles instead of 50, and you save as much rubber as you, on the average, turned into the scrap drive. Actually, nearly everybody can reduce his driving much more than that. All that can be done by voluntary reduction of driving is a service. All that can be done to reduce driving by Government limitations on driving, such as rationing of gasoline, is justified.

THE SAVING of rubber by reduced driving, by prolonging the life of tires, works to the benefit of the car owner. The saved rubber remains in his possession. Useful though the saying is, it does not add anything to the stock of rubber available to the Army or otherwise for military use.

If the Government need of rubber for military use becomes serious enough, the Government may need to turn to the rubber on cars and trucks privately owned. In such case, the Government would not, of course, ask for the tires as a gift, or at a nominal price, as in the case of scrap rubber. The Government would buy the needed tires, at whatever is a fair price. Since automobiles without tires would be useless, the Government might buy the whole automobile. There would be, of course, discrimination. Purchases at first sight might be from persons who have two cars, and are willing to sell one; or from others who have little use, or greatly lessened use, for their cars. The Government's need is great—150 tires would provide the rubber for a flying fortress.

The Government's need, the whole subject of rubber, has excited keen public interest. A helpful reader, in a letter to this column, makes what seems a practicable suggestion. She goes shopping, and on counters observes quantities of rubber goods on sale as usual—rubber toys, rubber hose, bath mats, all sorts of gadgets. The reader asks, why does not the Government go into the stores, buy the rubber goods as any other purchaser would, and transform them for military use?

Some of the public interest expresses itself in suggestions more generously well meant, and resourceful, than may be practicable. In any emergency such as this, volunteers turn up with ingenious solutions. Ideas about substitutes for rubber, or new ways of making synthetic rubber, descend upon Washington. Some who originate the ideas have the faith and real characteristic of inventors. Probably the proportion between the practicable and the impracticable is much the same as the relation of patents that work, to the whole number that crowd the files of the Patent Office. Unfortunately, we are in a hurry, and have no time for experiment.

There are several well known ways of making synthetic rubber, and some new ways proposed by persons whose experience qualifies them. They vary in time consumed for manufacture, in man power consumed, in the kinds of raw material consumed, and in other respects. To choose what ones to go on with is the work of officials who are well aware of the need for quantity and speed.

Ecuador Marks Centennial Of Her Liberator, Eloy Alfaro

By John Crane

Today marks the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Gen. Eloy Alfaro, whose public life exerted great and benign influence on the National life of his country, the Republic of Ecuador, and the fundamental problems of the Americas continuously over a period of nearly a half century.

He was the founder and leader of the Liberal Party in Ecuador and twice the President of his country. Today his son, Colon Eloy Alfaro, a distinguished graduate of the United States Military Academy, represent the Republic of Ecuador as Ambassador in Washington.

"As President of Ecuador Eloy Alfaro," stated James Brown Scott, "interpreted liberty in the sense of equality, and religion in terms of toleration. What his own country possessed he wanted every American country to have. Therefore, when in the 1800's Cuba declared its independence of Spain, Eloy Alfaro, as President of Ecuador advised Her Majesty Maria Christina, then Regent of Spain, to consent to the separation of Cuba from the home country, which separation, he assured Her Majesty, would result in immediate friendship and would be in her own interest.

"True of the past, Eloy Alfaro's views were to be true of the future, because today the relations between Spain and Cuba are also those of parent and child. And Cuba has, in appreciation of Eloy Alfaro's intervention, erected on its liberated territory a monument to his memory."

In Eloy Alfaro's mind, as in that of the Great Liberator Simon Bolivar, the ideal of real unity of the American States, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Straits of Magellan, was not different and distinct from the idea of emancipation: they were two aspects of the same goal. Not for a moment would he have been content with the spectacle of independence limited to Ecuador or to Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela, for he viewed the whole area of South America as the indivisible theater of the revolution and believed that association together for war ought to have its continuation in the fruitful work of peace.

The rank of the Ecuadorean statesman internationally was indicated by a well known author, who asserted that Juarez of Mexico, Marti of Cuba and Eloy Alfaro of Ecuador stood out in Spanish America, after the Great Liberator Bolivar, as representative men of their peoples. A true revolutionist, Alfaro destroyed prejudices, servitudes and chains and forged the means destined to weld the moral union of the nations established in the New World.

The writer Montalvo taught Alfaro to favor always a greater Americanism. It was his ambition that the gigantic task of dividing the Isthumus of Panama might be the work exclusively of American minds and American might. He deplored with deep emotion that sad thing that was the slavery of the negroes of Cuba. Strengthened by Montalvo's lessons, and the example of the great Bolivar, Eloy Alfaro was lifted by his own spontaneous inclinations from the character of an Ecuadorean leader to that of a proponent of the greatness of America.

In Central America, in Peru, wherever he pitched his exile's tent, he formed a circle of friends and supporters. Sparing of words, splendid in effusions coming from his heart, and of unaffected modesty, he was prominent in the advance guard of American civilization. He sought in the South spiritual food for his dreams of redemption; in the United States, he studied, confident of the triumph of his efforts, the essential elements for the implanting of progressive methods, precursors of the freedom of thought and the happiness of peoples.

The passing of this hero was an irreparable loss. Imprisoned by revolutionary leaders Eloy Alfaro and his friends were taken to a prison in Guayaquil, where the old warrior was denied the favor of even a box on which to sit. Around the prison there gathered a shouting crowd urged on by instigated assassins. The prison door was opened. Soldiers, rifle in hand, rushed upon the cell house. Eloy Alfaro, who had just thrown himself down on the floor, stood up and advanced as if to speak. A trooper appeared, aimed his weapon and discharged it in the General's face. Eloy Alfaro dropped lifeless.

Eloy Alfaro paid the price for having dedicated himself to reform and progress in his country, for having combated the supporters of prejudice and special interests, of tyrannies and traditions which were insults to humanity; and in this difficult task he showed the same constant zeal, the same bravery, the same creative faith, as when he was crossing seas and mountains followed by his valiant comrades, seeking death or the freedom of his fellow men.

After Eighteen Months

By Barnet Nover

The Battle For Egypt Resumed

IN THE NORTH African theater of war the British are now back where they started from 18 months ago.

NOVER

Once again, as in the dark months following the fall of France, Egypt is in danger of being overrun by the Axis. After having worsted the British Eighth Army in Libya, recaptured Tobruk and Bardia, taken large numbers of prisoners and captured much war booty, Marshal Rommel has pushed across the Libyan-Egyptian border.

The Axis column is now reported to have reached Sidi Barrani, which Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell and the Army of the Nile wrested from the Italians on December 11, 1940.

THE IMPORTANCE of Rommel's incursion into Egypt's western desert should not be exaggerated. The British very wisely made no large-scale effort to oppose him, but, on the contrary, abandoned Solum and Sidi Omar and retreated to a point well to the east. In that way they have come closer to their principal supply base at Mersa Matruh and established what is undoubtedly a more defensible position than the one they held after Tobruk's fall.

It would be wrong, however, to disguise the fact that in some respects the situation which confronts them today is distinctly more threatening than that which they faced in Egypt two years ago.

Then they were opposed by a purely Italian force commanded by Marshal Graziani, whose caution and timidity played into British hands. In those days, as Winston Churchill told Parliament on August 20, 1940, the British enjoyed "the complete sea command of the eastern Mediterranean." And neither the Balkans nor Crete had yet been overrun by the Axis.

TODAY a far different leader than Graziani is in command of the enemy forces in North Africa, and Rommel is not only a tactician of genius but enjoys the enormous additional advantage of possessing a large-scale mechanized force of demonstrated skill and competence.

Rommel's supply lines are long but they are in less danger from British sea power than were Graziani's supply lines in 1940. British naval strength in the eastern Mediterranean has been reduced through the demands made on British sea power as a result of the spread of the war to the Pacific and Indian Oceans. And the Axis is now, through the conquest of Greece and Crete, in a far better position to employ land-based air power against the British fleet in the Middle Sea than it was two years ago.

BUT THE PICTURE, from the viewpoint of the United Nations, is by no means entirely dark. Prime Minister Churchill is said to have informed the congressional leaders who conferred with him that Britain would hold and that there is no danger of losing Egypt and Suez. Since the British Premier is not a man given to wishful thinking his assurances can be taken at their face value.

Despite all the new and troublesome factors that have entered the Mediterranean picture during the past 18 months, there has also been a marked improvement in certain aspects of the British situation in Egypt.

General Wavell had only a handful of men when he attacked Sidi Barrani and finding the Italians weak proceeded to sweep across Cyrenaica. The Allied force in Egypt is now considerable, despite the losses suffered at Tobruk, and it is being strengthened. Long-range American and British bombers are now available in sufficient force in Egypt to make possible such destructive raids as those recently carried out against Bengazi, the principal Libyan entry point for Axis supplies from Sicily and Italy. And the summer season hardly lends itself to blitz action for any great length of time.

ROMMEL has a real job cut out for him if he tries to sweep across Egypt as last year he swept across Cyrenaica. In a sense, the fight is only beginning. He has won the first round. It was an important round. But the battle is by no means ended.

The fact must nonetheless be recognized that whether Rommel succeeds in forging ahead toward Alexandria and Suez or is held more or less within the confines of the Western Desert he has already achieved a tremendous tactical victory.

He has forced the Allies to divert to Egypt for the defense of Alexandria and the Canal men and material that, under happier circumstances, could be used elsewhere. To that extent the disaster of Tobruk means a weakening, to a greater or lesser extent, of potential allied strength in Russia, in Australia, in India, in the Middle East and elsewhere.

The forward air bases the Axis has acquired in eastern Libya and western Egypt will make it possible for Rommel to increase the harassment of British lines.

The latest developments in North Africa may have a deteriorating effect on the state of Malta. And the Axis can be depended on to exploit the Tobruk victory psychologically for all it is worth.

But if Rommel can be held, and the chances would seem to be good that he will be held, the Allies may in due course reverse the tide. Rommel, like his master, knows that time is not on the side of the Axis. That is why he is pressing forward so vigorously. Whether his grasp is equal to his reach remains to be seen.

Crooner Crosby Second In U.S. Salaries With $300,000

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 25.—Crooner Bing Crosby received $300,000 from Paramount Pictures last year to rank among the highest paid persons in the United States.

Crosby augmented his picture income with $100,640 from Decca records and an undetermined amount from his radio program. His earnings put him second, behind Louis B. Mayer, production director of Loew's, Inc., who was paid $704,426, annual reports filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed today.

Just behind Crosby in picture earnings were Fred MacMurray, $299,333, and Bob Hope, $294,166, both of Paramount, which also paid George C. De Sylva $69,945 as a share of gross receipts.

Crosby's radio earnings were not shown in the report of the National Dairy Products Corp., parent firm of Kraft Cheese Co., sponsor of his radio show. National Dairy paid its chairman, Thomas H. McInnerney, $150,580, and L. A. Van Bomel, president and director, $73,640, and Frederick J. Bridges, vice president and president of Hydrox Corp., $43,266.

Another picture company, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, did not report payments to its actors, actresses, directors, producers or writers, saying these payments were not considered bonus or shares in profits.

R. K. O. listed $103,410 for George J. Schaefer, president and director; $78,350 for Ned E. Depinet, vice president and director, and $26,612 for N. Peter Rathvon, vice president and chairman of the executive committee, and $24,000 for Merlin H. Aylesworth as special legal counsel.

Among executives who received sizable increases was Raymond H. Fogler, president, general manager and director of the W. T. Grant Co., who got $120,000, including $80,000 as bonus or profit share. Fogler got $75,000 in 1940.

G. L. Stiefel, president of the Central Ohio Steel Products Co., Galion, Ohio, jumped from $31,499 in 1940 to $78,799 last year; Harry Scullin, president of the Scullin Steel Co., St. Louis, drew $47,541 last year against $19,999 in 1940, and George L. L. Davis, vice president, $33,958 compared with $18,000 in 1940; Morris Goldblatt, president, and Nathan Goldblatt, secretary and treasurer, of Goldblatt Brothers, Inc., Chicago, received $104,887 each, compared with $50,000 each paid in 1940. Goldblatt Brothers also paid Frank Folsom, vice president, $52,083.

Other remunerations included:

Montgomery Ward & Co, Inc.—S. L. Avery, chairman, president and director, $100,500, C. D. Ryan, vice president and director, $87,950, E. R. Wimmer, vice president and director, $40,500. Godchaux Sugars, Inc., New Orleans—Charles Godchaux, president, $50,000; Jules Godchaux, vice president, $40,000; Walter Godchaux, $30,000.

Pan American Airways Corp.—Juan T. Trippe, president, general manager and director of both the corporation and Pan American Airways, Inc., exercised an option and purchased 50,000 shares of capital stock of the corporation at $12.50 a share. The market price was $16.44 a share at the time of the purchase. Evan E. Young and Harold M. Bixby, vice presidents of Pan American Airways, Inc., $23,650 each as salary and extra compensation. George L. Rihl, vice president, Pan American Airways, Inc., $21,000 salary and additional compensation. Young received $4576, Bixby $3881 and Rihl $4852 as distribution under management stock purchase plan.

Third of U. S. Workers Could Walk to Jobs

Princeton, N. J., June 25.—With Nation-wide gasoline rationing a virtual certainty, Washington administrators have the problem of seeing to it that American workers get to their factories and business firms without difficulty.

Solutions to the problem depend to a great extent on accurate information showing how far Americans live from their work and the means of transportation they now use to get there.

Since the United States census does not cover this point, the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted a Nation-wide survey to shed light on the problem of worker transportation.

1. Out of this survey comes a possible way to conserve the gasoline and tires on many millions of automobiles. Almost one-third of all people who ride in autos to a regular place of work actually live two miles or less from their workshops or offices.

If the Government could induce these people to walk to work instead of driving, the daily consumption of gasoline and wear of tires would be considerably reduced throughout the country.

2. A second fact of importance to Washington, and a fact which may surprise the OPA, is that if all automobiles, buses, trolleys, subways, trains and other means of transportation stopped running throughout the Nation, roughly 7 out of every 10 employed persons (70 per cent), including farmers, could get to work if they were willing to walk 2 miles or less.

3. But the remaining 30 per cent have to travel such long distances that the average distance for the country amounts to approximately four miles from home to work, a figure which excludes farmers. If farmers are included the average would be considerably reduced since most farmers live on their own place.

Because of tire and gasoline rationing changes are being made in the Nation's transportation habits but, as is the case with all habits, the changes are slow. So far they have affected relatively few people in the whole working population.

About one person in every six who formerly drove to work has changed his means of transportation in recent months. More are walking than before, others are using a public conveyance. A few, but only a few, are doubling up with neighbors driving to work.

In fact, it appears from the study that the public can double up to a much greater extent than at present. The OPA this week postponed the issuance of new gasoline ration cards until July 22 in order to give people in the rationed States more time to form "car-sharing clubs."

Other facts of interest revealed in the survey are as follows:

Unfortunately, persons engaged in war production, directly or indirectly, have to travel farther to work than the general average for all workers. Because war factories have frequently been located on the outskirts of cities or at some distance away, the war workers have to travel an average of 6.4 miles to work.

At the present time approximately 40 per cent of all workers with a regular place of employment, excluding farmers, walk to work or live at their place of work. They constitute about 14 million people.

About one-fourth of all employers and employes use some public conveyance to get to work, such as bus, trolley, subway, train, etc. Slightly more than one-third go to work in automobiles. One in every 100 pedals to work on a bicycle.

Along with the trolley car, the horse and buggy and the lost art of walking, bicycles are coming back into their own. If all the bicycles in the Nation were collected by the Government there would be about enough for all workers in war industries to pedal to work.

Eight million families, according to a survey by the Institute, own a total of 10,500,000 bicycles. Several million families have two or three bikes. More than 30,000 own as many as six.

U. S. Sub Finishes Crippled Carrier

By Walter Clausen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Pearl Harbor, T. H., June 25.—The story of an American submarine which played a deathly game of hide and seek with segments of the Japanese fleet which attempted to invade Midway was disclosed today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

Alternately surfacing and submerging while surviving four depth charge attacks, the submarine succeeded in firing its torpedoes at an aircraft carrier previously crippled by American bombers.

"Heavy black smoke enveloped the carrier," read the submarine's log, "and formed a cloud to a height of 1000 feet like that above the U. S. Arizona when she burned at Pearl Harbor last December. Next day there was no trace of the carrier."

But that was the story's end.

Ships on All Sides

Its beginning, also as recorded in the log and made public by Admiral Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, read on last June 4:

"The picture presented on the raising of the periscope was one never experienced in peacetime practices. Ships were on all sides moving across the field at high speed and circling away to avoid the submarine's position."

The submarine had received word at dawn of June 4 that a large formation of enemy planes was heading for Midway Island. Her commander ordered a change of course to intercept the carriers from which the enemy planes had been launched. His watch indicated 8 a. m. as the tops of the enemy masts came in view of the periscope.

Immediately the submarine found herself under a Japanese strafing attack. Submerging, she drew closer to the hostile formation, finding a battleship and three cruisers. The cruiser spotted the periscope. Unharmed by depth charges, the submarine still approached the enemy.

When the attack ceased she rose to periscope depth.

The battleship's entire broadside battery blasted at the slim periscope.

The commander of the submarine elected to make his own attack. From long range, he sent a torpedo after the battleship. The huge Japanese warship fled. A cruiser detached from the squadron tore after the submarine. A second depth charge attack thundered. The undersea fighter escaped.

A few minutes later the periscope again was lifted and revealed a Japanese carrier in the distance shifting course furiously. Above her hung a pall of antiaircraft smoke with small black blobs of shell-fire above that.

The submarine lowered the periscope as the Japanese cruiser started another depth charge attack. The submarine kept advancing.

Came a message that a Japanese carrier had been damaged by bombing. The submarine stalked one of the smoke clouds and found the wounded carrier moving slowly with a pair of cruisers. The carrier was of the Soryu class.

The submarine commander chose to complete the destruction of the carrier. Torpedoes hit their mark even as the cruisers bore down on the submarine with another depth charge attack, and fourth for the submersible.

Police to Quiz Stars as Fight Victim Lies Critically Injured

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, June 25.—A backyard clash between Errol Flynn's stand-in and Barbara Hutton's butler—aftermath of a birthday party for the actor attended by numerous movie notables—led to the arrest of the stand-in today as the butler lay near death.

So widely divergent were stories of the encounter that Capt. Verne Rasmussen of the police homicide squad said he intended to question some of the notables. The guest list included, among others, Mickey Rooney, Dinah Shore, Charles Chaplain, Tyrone Power and Annabella, Alexander Korda and Merle Oberon.

"We may have a homicide case on our hands," Rasmussen commented, as police stepped into the inquiry four days after the fight.

Booked on suspicion of assault with intent to do bodily harm was James Fleming, 33, Flynn's former butler and now also his personal secretary. Fleming, 6 feet 2 inches tall but weighing only 155 pounds, described himself as "hardly the pugilistic type."

Admitted Striking Blow

But he admitted, in a statement to detectives for the district attorney's office, that he struck Eric Gosta, the butler, hired to tend bar for the evening, insisting:

"I hit him after he took a swing at me."

Flynn's thirty-second birthday party was last Saturday, but the set-to occurred as it was breaking up in the early hours Sunday. Fleming related:

"He (Gosta) was mixing drinks with six ounces of whisky in them. Both Mr. Flynn and I noticed his condition and got him into the kitchen. We mixed the drinks ourselves after that. But Gosta kept coming back and interfering. As the evening went on he got more abusive.

"As they (the help) were going out the back door, Gosta shouted something at me in Swedish. I didn't know what he said, but it sounded insulting. I went outside and asked him to repeat it in English. Then he hit me and I struck back."

He showed reporters a mark under his left eye and asserted:

"The blow wasn't hard enough to knock a man down. Gosta fell and I suppose hit his head on the concrete."

Different Story

The butler is in the hospital with a fractured skull.

A different story was told by Kristian Chester, Flynn's erstwhile butler and Gosta's roommate.

Chester accused Fleming of "pestering" Gosta throughout the evening, finally chasing him out of the house, then striking the only blow—a hard punch to the chin.

Flynn himself was not available for comment, his studio reporting that his physician had ordered him to remain quietly in bed. Heiress Hutton visited the hospital, commenting only that she intended to "see that justice is done."

"A LIGHT INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE," new public morale tune dedicated to President Roosevelt by its composer, Carr van Sickler of Madrillon's Carr and Don orchestra, bears all the imprints of coming success. Kate Smith is delighted with the number, will soon sing it over the radio. Maestro Milton Davis of the Rainbow Room will introduce it on the air in Washington. Art Brown will play it at the Capitol Theater during the first week of July and it may also be the theme song of a stage show at the Capitol. Big bands will present it all over the country, including those of Carmen Cavallaro in New York, Don Bestor in Pittsburgh, Alex Holton on the West Coast and Don Taylor in the Deep South. You'll also be hearing the song in all of Washington's premier nighteries . . . There has been no disturbance at the German Embassy, where there is being maintained only the normal guard of two mounted policemen before the residence and two in front of the chancery, a guard which has been posted for years.

Senate and House Battle Over Farm Parity and Economy

The Senate and House yesterday locked horns in a fight over farm parity and economy issues that threatened to send at least two big departments into the new fiscal year without operating funds.

A conference report on the 162 million dollars Interior Department bill was rejected by the House by a 169-to-143 vote after members rebelled at acceptance of Senate increases totaling 25 million dollars.

The Interior bill joined the Agriculture appropriation bill in deadlock as conferees on the badly jammed farm funds sought new instructions from the two houses.

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Senate farm conferees, asked the Senate to "insist" on its parity compromise permitting the Government to release 125 million bushels of surplus wheat below parity for feeding and industrial uses. The Senate reaffirmed its position by a vote of 46 to 13.

Then, on two other roll call votes of 52 to 7 and 47 to 9, respectively, the Senate backed up its conference stand for increased appropriations for farm tenancy and farm rehabilitation loans and grants.

After another futile attempt at agreement, the deadlocked farm bill managers succeeded only in ironing out differences on two relatively minor provisions. They compromised on these items by "splitting the difference" between House and Senate appropriations for forestry and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Representative Tarver (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the House farm bill managers, today will go to the House for instructions. The House was expected once more to turn down the Senate's plan for marketing Government wheat stocks.

Motions may be made from the House floor to settle economy features of the House-Senate farm battle by meeting the Senate part way on its $50,319,000 increase for farm rehabilitation services and its 125 million-dollar boost for farm security loans and grants.

The surprise House action rejecting the Interior Department conference report meanwhile threatened Secretary of Interior Ickes' establishment with the same fiscal year exhaustion of funds faced by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard.

The current fiscal year ends Tuesday. Unless a settlement is reached sooner, which is highly improbable, both agencies will technically be without funds to meet personnel or other expenses. Passage of resolutions temporarily extending current year funds have been considered.

The House had swung an economy axe on Ickes' appropriations, slicing travel expenses, information items and many other funds. The Senate restored them, and conferees took most of the Senate increases, but the House yesterday refused to go along.

Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois, termed the Senate's 25-million-dollar increase "more than chicken feed, even in these days."

"Approval of this report would be a public confession by the House of the superior mentality of the Senate," Dirksen told colleagues. "We have just passed a 43-billion-dollar war bill and it is our duty to save every dollar not connected with the war effort."

Representative Carter (Republican) of California called the report "the most abject surrender by House conferees that I can remember."

Tomatoes Are Victory Food Special—Eat Your Share

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

TOMATOES are ripening. From now until the fall frost smites this scarlet vegetable down, it will continue to ripen and furnish excellent food. Since its marketing area is national, United States Agricultural Marketing Administration has designated the tomato as a Victory Food Special next week.

Martha Ellyn

American homemakers can stretch their food dollars and contribute to war activities by using the victory food specials as they are announced by the department, and thus make other foods available for wartime needs.

The virtues of tomatoes have not always been sung. But possessing the valuable vitamins they do they could not go forever unappreciated. Their rich red color, piquant flavor and health-promoting vitamins give them general appetite appeal. They also score high in food value because they are an inexpensive source of vitamin C. In fact, the tomato almost runs the gamut of the vitamin alphabet. One medium-sized ripe, red tomato will furnish about half of a day's requirement of vitamin C and about one-fifth of the vitamin A needs for a day. In addition, it also contributes some vitamin B1, vitamin G and the pellagra preventive vitamin.

A way I have recently learned of using the tomato is in an Almond-Tomato Double-Deck Sandwich. This sandwich is pictured above and the recipe is as follows:

Almond-Tomato Double-Deck Sandwich—Combine ½ cup finely chopped blanched almonds and ½ cup mayonnaise and stir to blend. Season cream cheese as desired with onion salt or minced onion, celery salt or chopped celery, Worcestershire sauce, tobasco sauce and sufficient mayonnaise or cream to give spreading consistency. Spread slices of buttered bread with cheese mixture, top with second slices of buttered bread. Cover top slices with thick slices of peeled, salted tomato. Spread tomato with almond-mayonnaise mixture. Place sandwiches under broiler, until almond topping is slightly brown. Serve immediately. Whole roasted almonds and sprigs of water cress are attractive garnishes. Sufficient almond spread for 5 to 6 sandwiches.

WALNUT CHEESE STUFFED TOMATOES—Wash and remove stem end from 4 to 6 tomatoes. Cut portion of center from tomato. Set tomatoes in refrigerator to chill while preparing stuffing. Cut tomato ends fine and add to 1 pound cottage cheese to which has been added 1 tablespoon minced onion or chives, 1 tablespoon minced green pepper, ½ cup broken walnut meats, and salt to taste. Chill cheese filling and then stuff tomatoes, piling tomatoes high. Garnish with salad greens and whole walnut kernels. Serve with French dressing. Serves 4 to 6. Cold sea foods are also prime choice for fillers.

BAKED TOMATOES AND SCALLOPED CORN—Wash 8 tomatoes, cut slice from each top. Scoop out pulp, taking care not to break skin. Chop pulp. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in top of double boiler. Stir in 2 tablespoons flour, blend, add 1 cup milk gradually, stirring constantly. Add ½ teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add ½ teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add 2 cups cooked or canned corn, 1 well beaten egg, ½ green pepper and tomato pulp. Melt 1 tablespoon butter, combine with ¼ cup bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven for 25 minutes.

New Presentations of Asparagus Tips

Asparagus is a vegetable that will team up fine with a number of foods. Try rolling several spears of cooked asparagus in slices of enriched bread and broil until luscious brown. Serve with crisp bacon strips and stuffed olives for a Sunday evening spread.

Roll a sheaf of cooked asparagus in biscuit dough and bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for an individual serving at your first party luncheon this spring. Garnish the plate with a salad of sliced hard-cooked eggs and pour a generous spoonful of nippy cheese sauce over the entree.

Cut circles from slices of enriched bread and pour creamed asparagus over them when the children come home for their noon lunch. Have a pitcher of milk and a basket of toast on the table for extra servings. Active youngsters will relish this combination.

Dishes Achieve New Beauty Through Transfers

America has made a name in the ceramic field, but unfortunately not enough American know about it, declared Viktor Schreckengost, American designer of dinnerware, at the Pittsburgh Show of Associated Glass and Pottery Manufacturers. At the meeting an announcement was made of a new decalcomania process for dinnerware. This development was made by the du Pont Co. because of the limited supply of American-made transfers, at the war's start, when only 30 per cent were used for domestic ware.

"America has depended for such a long time on English, French, Japanese and other imports for its Sunday china, that it is a very difficult habit to break," stated Mr. Schreckengost. "American manufacturers have been largely responsible, being content to copy and imitate these wares. Many housewives have had the choice of the import or a cheap American copy. But exceptional strides have been made in the last 10 years, and an American style is beginning to emerge."

Now a new way of making these transfers has been developed. The new technique gives an exact reproduction of the artist's sketch in every detail and, for the first time, presents the possibility of new color ranges for decalcomania patterns.

Recipe Contest—Sugarless Foods

Sugar Challenge Met by Contestants Through Other Sweets

By The Post Food Editor

COOKING without sugar isn't such a hardship to the ingenious woman. The Post recipe contestants have met the challenge of the sugar shortage with many an innovation in the recipes they have submitted. They set their heads thinking and found out that there are other sweetening agents just as workable, just as energizing and even richer in nutritive value than sugar. These agents are honey, molasses, corn sirup and maple sirup, and dried fruits.

Dried fruits became fairy godmothers as sweetening agents. They stepped right in and allowed the cook to go on serving delicious desserts, breads and many other dishes, because they could sweeten concoctions just as well and also supply minerals, vitamins and roughage.

Prunes are the magic by which Mrs. Andrew G. Weaver, 3915 Fifth Street Northwest, achieved a sugarless dessert. A prune whip is always a favorite dessert but when made into a mold and served with a soft custard sauce it takes on new appeal. For this worthy recipe Mrs. Weaver wins the first award of $3. Her recipe follows:

Molded Prune Whip—Remove pits from 1½ cups cooked prunes and beat prunes to a pulp or put through food chopper using fine knives. Combine ¼ cup prune liquid with ½ cup corn syrup, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, and ¼ teaspoon salt and bring to a boil. Remove from heat. Add 2 teaspoons lemon juice and 1 teaspoon plain gelatin dissolved in 2 tablespoons cold water and stir until dissolved. Beat 3 egg whites stiff. Pour the hot liquid over egg whites and beat well. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla extract and the prunes and mix thoroughly but lightly. Pour into a wax paper-lined mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and slice. Serve with soft custard sauce. Serves six.

Peach Pot Pie is the winning recipe for the $2 award. Mrs. Charles N. Malone, 2737 Devonshire Place Northwest, "author" of this recipe, meets the sugar shortage with the use of strained honey and dextrose sugar. Dextrose sugar may be bought at the drug store and as yet has not been rationed. Although this dextrose sugar costs slightly more than pulverized sugar—which it resembles—yet it is not exceedingly expensive.

The following is the winning recipe submitted by Mrs. Malone:

Peach Pot Pie—Make a rich biscuit dough, enough for the top of a pie. Fill pie pan 2-3 full of ripe, sliced canned peaches of good sirup consistency. To the peaches add 2 tablespoons strained honey and a few drops of almond flavoring. Cover with the pastry, pressing down well at edges, but leaving a vent in the top for the escape of the juices and steam. Before putting on the pastry top, dot with pieces of butter and put a piece in the opening of the top. Bake quickly for 5 minutes so that it will brown and then lower heat to medium, 325 degrees, and bake until well done, about three-quarters of an hour. Serve with hard sauce made in the usual way for making this sauce, using 2 tablespoons soft butter and ¾ cup dextrose. Add a bit of hot water after the creaming process, and nutmeg to flavor, or use sherry as flavoring.

Mrs. Donald Campbell, Sandy Spring, Md.—Apricot honey pie.

Mrs. E. T. Hiehle, 3422 South Dakota Avenue Northeast—Lemon nut ice cream.

Mrs. Charles W. Wheeler, 1646 Thirty-third Street Northwest—Corn sirup cake with honey-chocolate frosting.

Mrs. Trendley Dean, 224 North Jackson Street, Arlington, Va.—Chocolate peanut butter marbles.

Mrs. R. C. Philips, 631 Allison Street Northwest — Peppermint stick ice cream.

Mrs. Eldora E. Hefner, 3507 Twentieth Street Northeast—Pecan honey pie.

Mrs. A. E. Fletcher, Waldorf, Md.—Whole wheat honey cookies.

Mrs. Lillian Boswell, Waldorf, Md.—Stone jar molasses cookies.

Mrs. Stephen Gallwair, 3033 Sixteenth Street Northwest—Prune shortcake.

Mrs. Joyce Johnson, 412 L Street Southeast—Sweet potato pie.

Apple Sauce Inspires Vitamin-Laden Food

Applesauce inspires a dessert that is made with the addition of vitamin enriched wheat flakes. It can be assembled in a few minutes and baked in 20 minutes. Stewed fresh apples or unsweetened canned applesauce may be used to make his dessert.

Apple Sauce Betty—Arrange apple sauce in a loaf pan or casserole in alternate layers with wheat flakes which have been mixed with ¼ cup melted butter, ¾ cup light brown sugar and 1½ teaspoons cinnamon. Top layer should be vitamin enriched wheat flake mixture. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for about 20 minutes. Serve with cream if desired. Yield, 8 servings—4½ by 8½ inch dish.

Roast Beef in English Style

Ginny Simms, movie actress, likes beef roasted in the old English manner—the roast covered with a thick coating of ordinary salt. Rub the roast over with a moist cloth, dust with flour, then cover it thickly with table salt, thick enough to make a crust of the salt. Then place meat in oven at 300 degrees, cooking in even heat at low temperature from the beginning. Ginny says it takes 20 minutes to the pound for rare beef, 25 minutes to the pound for medium, 30 to 35 minutes for well done. The beef comes out with the salt a delectable crust all around. Good eating.

Ginny, who loves parties, is having something special in the way of kitchens built into the new home she is having built out in the valley north of Hollywood. She's out there every day, watching every inch of progress.

Outlaw Strike By 3500 Shuts Ohio Pipe Mill

By the Associated Press

Lorain, Ohio, June 25.—A strike involving 3500 C. I. O. steelworkers seeking wage adjustments closed the war-rushed pipe mills of the National Tube Co. here today and threatened to involve the rest of the concern's 10,000 employes.

One of the largest strikes in the steel industry since Pearl Harbor and the first in the 46-year history of the United States Steel Corp.'s Lorain subsidiary, it came as corporation officials from Pittsburgh assembled here for the blowing in tomorrow of a new blast furnace.

Declaring the strike "illegal and a direct violation of a contract signed with the company last April," William F. Donovan, district director of the C. I. O. United Steelworkers of America, which represents the men, pleaded with them to return to their jobs.

His appeal went unheeded as nearly 1000 strikers voted not to return before a Saturday meeting. Meanwhile, Robert Smedley, chairman of the union grievence committee, expressed concern lest the strike spread to the 6500 other plant employes.

Some strikers massed outside the plant entrance for a time today but no disturbances were reported.

No strike vote was taken before the walkout, said Thomas Tycraft, recording secretary of the plant local. He attributed the work stoppage to complaints about the company dealing "unjustly" with pipe mill employes.

Company officials made no comment. United States Labor conciliators watched the dispute, but said they had not been asked to intercede.

Auto Workers Wage Demand Goes to WLB

Detroit, June 25 (AP).—The $1-a-day wage boost demands of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) upon the big three of the automobile industry—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—presumably will all be answered by the War Labor Board.

The union's contract dispute with the Ford Motor Co. was certified today to the War Labor Board, which already is studying the General Motors case and is expected to receive the Chrysler issue.

Affecting upward of 200,000 men now at work on war jobs in the converted auto plants of the big three, the contract issues have resulted in deadlocks. A main point in each is the union's $1-a-day wage increase demand, but there are also numerous other questions.

which now require so much of their time and attention.

"I fully realize that having an elected delegate will not satisfy the large number of Washington citizens who wish to live in a self-governing American community. However, I believe that having a delegate now will greatly increase the probability of an elected District government at a future date. At any rate, there would no longer be 'taxation without representation,' and the residents of the Nation's Capital would again have a share in making their laws and directing their affairs."

Moon Adds Luster to Stars Pro Arte

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel and the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress present the Pro Arte String Quartet (Antonio Brosa, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prevost and George Sopkin) on Thursday night in Meridian Hill Park. Program: Quartet in G major, K. V. 387 (Mozart), Quartet in C major, Op. 59, No. 3 (Beethoven), Quartet in G minor, Op. 10 (Debussy).

BROWN

In Meridian Hill Park last evening, moonlight dimmed the starlight after which C. C. Cappel named the outdoor concerts of chamber music which are now in their second summer of existence. The third concert of the series brought back to Washington the Pro Arte String Quartet, an organization which has played here so many times, both in its original and its altered personnel, that it is always welcomed as an old friend. Two years ago the quartet suffered what seemed like an irreparable disaster in the death of Alphonse Onnou, the founder and first violin, but it rallied from the shock with the vitality which all good ensembles possess, and now in its thirtieth year is maintaining its artistic finesse and high standard of performance.

While the program was conventional for connoisseurs of chamber music, it was made up of three works which were starting at the time of their first performance. Mozart's G major quartet, composed in 1782, so bewildered musicians that one noble amateur who tried to play a part in it was so angered by the outrage committed on his ears that he tore up the sheets, and some copies which had been sent to Italy were returned to the publisher with the comment that they were filled with printer's errors. It is hard for us to think of Mozart as the Stravinski of his day, for this quartet, as well as its companions in the set of six dedicated to Haydn, has the appearance of perfect clarity and consummate beauty.

Beethoven's C major quartet, the last of the three great quartets dedicated to Andrei Rasumovski and therefore labeled the "Russian" quartets, met with similar misunderstanding. Felice Alessandro Radicati, a good violinist who fingered the Rasumovski quartets at Beethoven's request, remarked contemptuously: "Surely you do not consider these things to be music." Radicati himself composed quartets which he doubtless thought were good music, but they have been forgotten and he is remembered primarily because he repeated Beethoven's reply: "Oh, they are not for you but for a later age."

Debussy's solitary quartet in G minor was not quite so rudely received because the public had become accustomed to the peculiarities of his idiom, but it was not regarded as a masterpiece by any means or even as good quartet writing. There were plenty of critics to belittle it as shallow, tenous and inchoate. Such are the queer tricks that time plays with art, and one cannot help wondering what future generations will think of music which we regard today as ugly and unbearably dissonant.

Maryland Bar Head Rebukes Supreme Court

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., June 25.—The head of the Maryland Bar Association charged today that the Supreme Court of the United States had "freed itself not only from precedents but also from the words of the statute" in order "to serve the purposes of the New Deal."

In an address prepared for delivery before the forty-seventh annual meeting of the Maryland State Bar Association, Charles Markell of Baltimore, retiring president, attacked the "reconstructed" court and Federal administration agencies, particularly the National Labor Relations Board.

When the NLRB appeared before the Supreme Court, he said, it was "not a 'Daniel come to judgment;'" but, he continued, "an employer before the board is a Daniel in the den of lions without an angel to shut the loans' mouths."

Discussing a report on the reform of Federal administrative agencies, he said, "when a Robespierre exercises administrative power, subject to judicial review by a Pontius Pilate, the situation cannot be appreciatively relieved by enactment of a statutory book of etiquette.

"The only remedy is to replace biased partisan judges with independent impartial judges."

Markell quoted Mr. Roosevelt as saying he would appoint Supreme Court Justices who would not "undertake to override the judgment of Congress on legislative policy." And, Markell continued, "he has appointed such Justices and they have lived up to his requirements."

He said that results in the labor board cases "and the language of the court in some of them, suggest that less than a scintilla (of evidence) may be enough to support an order of the board."

The court's ruling, he said, involved "unlimited liabilities on the part of the employer . . . it does not seem humanly possible to maintain toward employes the required mask of complete imbecility."

How to Change Husband's Diet —It May Work

Too Much Talking bout Nutrition Is l Approach

By Ida Jean Kain

WOMEN like to talk too much. If you are to have any success in getting your husband to eat right, you may have to soft pedal the subject of nutrition. As far as he is concerned, it is probably in the same class as diet—which he loathes—and the less said the better the chance of having his cooperation.

A man is never keen about having his meals carefully regulated. The mere idea seems to set up a natural resistance on his part. Of course, there is your side. Having gone to all these nutrition classes, it must be a temptation to impress him with what you have found out. But don't do it—not unless you have that rare man who really wants to know what this and that have got and why it makes any difference to him.

Vary Methods

With most husbands, the devious ways and changing food habits work better. We'll say your husband dislikes cooked greens but goes for chicken and rice with chicken gravy. Give him what he wants along with a modest serving of spinach or some other green partially camouflaged with sliced hard-cooked egg. Maybe he will be so pleased with his favorite dish that he will eat the spinach to please you. If not, go to some trouble and prepare the green as a ring of souffle. That ought to bring him around.

Apparently, men are being won over to salads. No doubt the main reason is that salad is no longer a dainty teatime item. If your husband hangs back, try him with a chef's salad made with watercress, lettuce, romaine, chickory, radishes, carrot slivers, strips of ham or ham loaf, cooked tongue and American or Swiss cheese. Occasionally you might vary it with anchovies and hard-boiled eggs, or salted nuts instead of meat. Put the mixture into salad bowl, toss it about lightly and let him help himself. He will come back for more.

Hot Bread a Treat

A friend of mine confides that she converted her husband to 100 per cent whole grain bread by purchasing a special homemade variety and serving it hot, wrapped up in a napkin. He thought it such a treat that he ate it without any urging. Now he prefers whole wheat bread.

Your newer knowledge of nutrition probably tells you that the average meals are deficient in calcium. It is hard to get grownups, men particularly, to drink their milk. But you can get around that. Serve soups made with milk and garnished with parsley, croutons or a sprinkling of grated snappy cheese. Baked custard with crushed fresh strawberries will supply the other half of the day's requirement of milk.

Perhaps you are away ahead of me in your methods for changing a man's food habits. If you are, I wish you would send your suggestions in. I'll pass them along to the wives who are having nutrition trouble.

Washable Summer Date Frock

Washable rayon is being featured this summer with a money back guarantee, but a washable frock with embroidery trim is news. The neatly turned out dress, above, of washable Celanese rayon is one of these. It is available in natural color trimmed with big red cherries in fast color seed embroidery. It's doubtful this "Eve" will need her apples.

How to Ask For Your New Rayon Hose

If it gives you an inferiority complex to have the sales clerk say, "What denier, please," when you ask for a pair of new rayon hose, here is the answer.

You are accustomed to using "2-thread and 3-thread" to specify the sheerness you want in silk hosiery. That is because two or three threads of silk are twisted together to make the knitting yarn.

In rayon stockings, a single thread of selected size determines the sheerness of the stocking. The term used to denote the size of the rayon thread is "denier." By definition, a unit length of 50 denier thread weighs 50 ounces. Correspondingly, the same length of 75 denier thread would weigh 75 ounces. In other words, the higher the denier the heavier the thread This is directly opposite to the system used in cotton threads, where the higher thread numbers designate the finer threads.

These comparisons will help you when buying: 50 denier is comparable with 3 to 4 thread; 75 denier is comparable with 5 to 6 thread; 100 denier is comparable with 7 thread.

The size of the knitting stitch also contributes to the weight and sheerness of a stocking. This factor is defined as "gauge," which is simply the number of stitches per inch and a half. Thus, 39-gauge is a relatively coarse knit, 45-gauge is the standard general-purpose knit, 51-gauge is the fine knit, and 61-gauge is extremely fine. The term "gauge" is used in connection with rayon stockings in exactly the same manner as with silk stockings.

Wartime Shopper

The war may cramp all my movements,
Yet my shopping is simple and sane,
I'm buying clothes for the purpose they're needed,
And not to wear on some nebulous "train."
I can weaken and squander my money,
On "bargains" whose value is naught,
For there's always the happy assurance
"Now next year this cannot be bought."

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Steppit Wadd-Racy-De-Crasher, prominent socialite divorcee, is starting a movement of protest to the proposal to tax alimony. She has called a meeting in the Babylonian room of the Hotel Swank, for tomorrow afternoon, of local divorcees interested in the matter.

Assisting her in lining up the protesters are: Mrs. Smith Toddy, Mrs. Brown Toddy and Mrs. Jones Toddy, former wives of Ellsworth Toddy, millionaire playboy and patron of ambitious show girls; Mrs. Sindbad Smith-Smythe, third wife of the nut cup tycoon; the princess Torso, who despite her recent marriage to the former Riviera esthete, is still drawing alimony from Elmer Zush, the pigs-in blanket magnate; Mrs. Antelope Plunkette, the former Maisie Antelope, deb of last season, who was divorced after three months of marriage to Philander Z. Plunkette, who holds the Truthtown divorce record.

Also interested in the movement are Mrs. Slinker Bleakhouse, best dressed woman for six successive years, whose former husband obtained his divorce at Reno last year; and Mrs. Dizzard Dithertон-Dazzle, latest inseparable companion of the much married Philander Z. Plunkette.

"This movement is wholly a matter of principle with us," said Mrs. Steppit Wadd-Racy-DeCrasher last night. "How will sheltered women like myself live if our alimony is taxed? We have a hard enough time eking out as it is. Why, if my alimony payments were whittled down any further I would not be able to get out of town all summer!"

Mrs. Bridgeport Billow, prominent Truthtown dowager, has announced her opposition to Secretary Wallace's recent outline of a post-war world. She is especially aroused over his statement that this country will belong to "the common man."

"That is a dangerous doctrine," Mrs. Billow told The Torch last night. "The next thing we know someone will be advocating that the country belong to the 'common woman,' and you know what that means."

Maiden Speech

Mrs. Lucius Gilderlyly, who has just been appointed Super-Coordinator of Coordinating Activities of Truthtown's Coordinating Groups, addressed a mass meeting of local coordinators last night at Echo Auditorium.

"I haven't the slightest idea what this is all about," said Mrs. Gilderlyly, "but since I was told that my services were needed, I dropped everything and rushed back from Ritz Springs, where I have been taking a rest cure. I am always ready to serve my country wherever I am needed, and just as soon as I find out what I am supposed to do, I will call a series of committee meetings."

Mountain Heather Scent in Soap

Mountains may be one of the unattainables this summer, the gasoline problem being what it is. But you can bring the fragrant beauty of the mountain heather to you with a delightful new soap. It is exquisitely perfumed with the fragrance of mountain heather.

The cakes are so formed as to fit comfortably into the palm, and are decorated with a graceful spray of heather bells and tinted a delicate pink. Three cakes are presented in a dainty pink and opal box which makes it a perfect gift for the most fastidious person.

Saving Ways for Wartime

If you're making a pinafore out of an old summer dress and planning to wear it with frilly blouses cut the armholes sufficiently high so that it can double for a sun dress.

• • • •

Odds and ends of left-over yarn can make a bouquet bloom on the shoulder of that dress that "needs something fresh." Follow a flower pattern in your favorite print and embroider it in any stitch you like. You might run a daisy chain around the hem.

• • • •

To make over a fly-front dress, a Waste Warden saddle stitches the length of the fly-front, and outlines the collar and sleeves. Done in a contrastoing color, it adds a definite note of smartness. To get stitches even, practice on scraps of material.

Give a brand new summer feeling to that dark dress. Cut out flowers or a bouquet from an old print dress or a fabric remnant and applique in attractive clusters over the shoulder just as you would wear a corsage. A third dimension can be achieved by quilting.

• • • •

Make an old dress vivid and new with a pair of pancho sleeves. Remove old sleeves and set in long, loose, floppy sleeves cut from a fabric of contrasting color or bright print. You might make them from an old evening dress or negligee.

• • • •

Turn your last year's jacket dress into a suit. Cut off the dress waist which may show wear, and finish skirt off neatly. Add frilly blouse, wear with jacket and there's your new suit. Good parts of top of dress might be made into a simple hat. Pattern counters are featuring many interesting new hat designs to make at home.

• • • •

A dress with worn sleeves, neck or armholes, makes a charming pinafore. Waste Wardens simply cut out sleeves, leaving a wide armhole and cut a low, square neck. They hem or bind edges, and wear over contrasting or white blouses.

Mary Haworth's Mail

As Man's Temporary Federal Appointment Lengthens Into Years of Permanent Service, His Wife Refuses To Join Him Here and Make a Home; He Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married 12 years and have one child,—a son. My home is in a distant city, where my wife and son live. Several years ago, at a time when I was not otherwise employed, I was offered a temporary appointment with the Government. My wife and I discussed the offer and it was agreed that I should accept the job. I came to Washington, with no intention of staying past the 90 days stipulated in the temporary appointment.

However, while working on this job, I was urged to take the Civil Service exam, as one was then being held. I did so and passed with an excellent average, which led to a probationary appointment. My wife agreed I should accept it. All this time my wife was employed back home. She had a housekeeper to look after the house and the boy. It was assumed by me that once I had passed my probationary period and received a permanent appointment under Civil Service at fairly good wages, my family would join me here, and we could sell or rent our home, as well as another piece of property we owned.

However, as year succeeded year, I continued working for the Government, but my family elected to remain in our home in the distant city.. I made periodical visits home at times my wife and son visited me. This condition exists today.. I am a week-end husband, more or less. There is no question of my wife being interested in any other man. She has our home, our son, her church interests and educational pursuits. Meantime, our son is reaching an age where he really needs a father's companionship, but his mother refuses to leave her job and the house we originally established as home. I cannot get as good a job back there as I hold here. But my wife could get a job here, in the Government or out of it, comparable to the one she holds. But she claims she knows no one here.

So far as my social status goes, I have all the liabilities of a married man; but ostensibly I am living a bachelor life. My wife has informed me she will not object to a divorce; but I am not interested in such a step. I feel my son is entitled to a normal home life with both parents. Yet nothing I can do or say will persuade my wife that her place there with me. While I have built up a beautiful home which my wife and son enjoy, I am there only as a temporary visitor; and this has been going on for years. I am getting very tired of the arrangement.

I am interested in having your view of the action I should take. I hate to take any action against my son's mother. I lost my father by death when I was quite young; and I wouldn't want my son to be in the same boat. His mother is of the highest quality and a good Christian woman in every way. She is well educated and above reproach. Does the problem require a major operation to settle it? C. B.

Bold Action Required To Defend Rights

DEAR C. B.: Your wife's readiness to accept divorce as the solution of the impasse, when dissolution of family ties is the last thing you want, causes me to wonder whether her character is, indeed, of the highest quality. That attitude strikes me as being cannily self serving at this late date—entirely in keeping with her consistent refusal to consider your wishes or welfare ahead of her own preference or convenience.

I think that, to her, marriage is primarily, an investment in personal comfort; and that, in the existing arrangement, she finds herself just about as "well fixed" as she aspires to be—with the result that any logical arguments in favor of a change of circumstance, for the boy's sake or your sake, would glance off her caloused complacency like water off a duck's back. Every student of the human scene knows women like her—women who smugly prize nominal wifehood as an end in itself; as a socially admirable status, higher in degree than spinsterhood; and not as challenge and opportunity to make a continuous creative contribution to the personality and experience of husband and children (if any).

I think she is more engrossed with "seeming" than "being." Whatever superficial surge of emotional interest she once felt for you has long since been superseded by her equally superficial bustling enthusiasm for "many things." And to the extent that she fails, wilfully or witlessly, to cooperate with her loyally disposed husband in making the mutual best of any difficulties that beset him in earning "an honest living,"—to that extent does she fall short of "good Christian womanhood." She may be well educated; but she lacks wisdom and a sound sense of values. And so long as she puts her own comfort of ego or body, her community rating as "a woman of importance," or any other self-considerations ahead of her son's incontrovertible need of a father's companionship, so long does she merit stern reproach.

Your wife would sooner divorce you than join you here for the simple reason that she has what SHE wants, just as things are—namely: the honorable title of Missus, a comfortable home paid for and sufficient income to run it well, an easy groove and respected niche in a "nice" community and a son to be her emotional mainstay. If you as an individual had ever meant a great deal to her, she would never have been content to live apart from you for any length of time. It was probably with an unconscious sigh of relief that she packed you off to Washington; and now, I daresay, when you blunder into the picture on occasional weekends, you are about as welcome as a bull in a china shop.

What you have meant to her is an accessory to the fact of her matron's status; plus, of course, the financial contributions you have made to her household security. If she needs anything more to make her content, it is guarantee or assurance that you will hereafter "go your way," letting her run her life and her son's life to suit herself, with no modifications or restrictions issuing from you. Supposing you were satisfied with the long standing, quasi-separation arrangement, she would undoubtedly "let it ride." But should you undertake to resume married life with her, under the same roof,—say, by giving up your job here and going back home to try your luck,—I predict you would find her aggressively antagonistic to the idea.

To recapitulate, then, she will not come here, because of disinterest in you that verges on aversion. Economically, you cannot afford to go back there, risking unemployment. Moreover, she would not welcome your return, even if you braved every economic risk to return. So, how do you propose to reconcile yourself to the situation? There can be no turning back the pages of the years. I judge you would be a man in the latter thirties; and with so much life expectancy ahead, you would be foolish to stand, like Lot's wife, looking back perpetually, transfixed with regret at the spectacle of what cannot be undone.

It seems to me you have a bitter choice between (1) acceding to your wife's indirect bid for full custody of the boy and sole ownership of the home she occupies, plus alimony allowance,—which concessions sh. undoubtedly counts on, in the event of divorce;—and (2) forcing her hand and bringing her out in the open, in her true colors, by instituting divorce action against her, on grounds of tacit desertion, and asking joint custody (or half-time care) of your son, as well as an equitable property settlement.

The latter action, though harsh, is justified, in my opinion, because I believe that in her own quiet, sanctimonious way, your wife is playing a stealthy game of "highway robbery;" that she is intent on robbing you of home and child and establishing a lifetime lien on your earnings, if you are tolerant enough to let that happen. Yet, I imagine if she were confidentally faced with the prospect of getting "the short end of the stick," in the event of divorce, she would speedily withdraw her erstwhile refusal to make her home with you. So, if you wish to guarantee for your son a two-parent household, or, at the very least, some companionship with you, you must counter your wife's bland maneuvering with an all-out show of fighting strength, that grants her no quarter on the specious ground of hallowed motherhood. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

IT'S ABOUT TIME to try this corsage on a white or black dinner dress. Three sprigs of tiny-leafed ivy anchored by a large important looking pin. At the end of an evening of decorating you, the sprigs go into a bowl and decorate your house

Necklace Effect In Shoulder Strap

When is a necklace not a necklace? When it's a shoulder strap. No, not double talk, but the beginning of a description of a new evening gown from the wardrobe of Rosalind Russell.

Gown is black, the long-sleeved bodice cut off-the-shoulder, but brought to a high point in the center front. Attached to this point a band of the frock fabric which goes round the neck like a choker necklace. At the point where this "necklace" is fastened to the gown Miss Russell fastens a delicate diamond pin.

In the Bag

If it's your turn to wash your own precious stockings, as well as those of Mom and Sis, you'd better take extra care not to snag them with rough nails or a ring. A little trick that might save complaint (and runners) is to place the hose in a fine mesh or net bag, then suds them up and down for about three minutes. This method takes a few more rinsings, but it's worth the effort.

Orchid Meets Snood

Now that snoods have lost their hats and tie on the hair with a perky bow, it is fetching to pass a flower through the bow. If it's an orchid that you choose for that special occasion, take care to fasten it on securely without stabbing the stem. One orchid will last through three afternoons and evenings, if placed in the refrigerator at the end of each wearing.

Visiting King Negotiates Crowded Social Schedule

Press Conference, Congressional Appearance, Luncheon at Legation Accent Calendar

By Patricia Grady

Washingtonians kept busy at a number of small fetes yesterday, but their hearts weren't in it. Their eyes were turned toward the goings and doings of the 18-year-old Yugoslav monarch, King Peter. Like all of his days in the Capital, His Majesty had an "official" day yesterday that would have tried the strength and poise of rulers of three times his age and experience.

Bright and early yesterday morning he moved from his overnight quarters at the White House to the menage of visiting rulers and statesmen, Blair House, where at 11 o'clock he received the press. Then he went on to a luncheon at the Yugoslav Legation after his speech to the joint meeting of the House and Senate at the Capitol. Yesterday afternoon he received the foreign chiefs of mission at Blair House and later found time to attend a reception given in his honor at the Mayflower by the Newspaper Women's Club.

First list to be released since Peter's arrival in Washington was the luncheon yesterday. Since a legation is an extra-territorial possession of the nation it represents, King Peter was host at a fete on his own territory. A stag luncheon, the event drew several Cabinet members, a sprinkling of United States statesmen and top Government production men.

Many Notables At Luncheon

The Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, was there, as were the Postmaster General, Frank Walker, the Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard; Elmer Davis, new information czar; Norman Davis, American Red Cross chairman; Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia and Belgium; Donald Nelson, whose social appearance is rare even in answer to a King's bidding; Sir Ronald Campbell, Minister of the British Embassy; Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State; Breckinridge Long, another Assistant Secretary of State; Edward Stettinius, James Clement Dunn, Col. Thomas Betts, the United States Military Aide to King Peter, and John Wiley, former American envoy to Latvia.

The Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Momcilo Nincic, was, of course, among those present and also there were the Minister of the Court, Radoji Knezevic, who was formerly the King's tutor, and three members of the Yugoslav government, His Excellency Jevtitch, His Excellency Trifunovitch and His Excellency Cubrilovic.

Unlike yesterday, when he had a whole evening set aside for unofficial pleasure or more probably a much needed rest, King Peter won't have many minutes to himself today. He will visit the Red Cross this morning, after which a tour of the National Gallery of Art is on his itinerary. Then he'll make his spotlighted appearance at the Press Club luncheon and during the afternoon he is hoping to find time to call at Walter Reed Hospital. Tomorrow night is the dinner at the Carlton at which the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, will entertain.

A Cat's Eye View: Courtly Senator Tom Connally had the galleries and his colleagues gasping yesterday when he walked firmly in front of King Peter leading him to and from the rostrum in the House chambers. . . . The press lookers-onners were a little shaky in their royal etiquette but the concensus was that Senator Connally should have followed in the royal wake or should have preceded the King backwards. . . . Fortunately the day wasn't too warm, for the Yugoslav monarch was rushed through his appearance before Congress so quickly that he didn't have a chance to drink the water placed close at hand—though he eyed it longingly several times—until after his address was completed. . . . Considering his schedule, Peter should have had circles under his eyes but he seems to be thriving on the excitement and succession of events timed to the split second.

Talks to President Until After Midnight

The young King, whose unofficial engagement to Princess Alexandra of Greece is an avid conversation subject at most current gatherings, sat up until 2 o'clock talking to the President and Prime Minister Churchill after the state dinner in his honor at the White House Wednesday night. . . . "He speaks better English than the Duke of Windsor," observed someone attending his press conference yesterday. . . . While that may not be true, it is certain that he speaks better American. . . . He has a secret passion to drive a jeep. . . . He handles questions with the confidence of a diplomatic veteran . . . Washington is sold on him.

King Peter Captivates His Audience At Newspaper Women's Club Party

18-Year-Old Monarch Gives Impromptu Talk And Wins Many Hearts

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor.

AN 18-YEAR-OLD King completely captivated his audience. His Majesty was none other than King Peter II of Yugoslavia. His audience was the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington and their guests. Time was yesterday afternoon and the occasion was the club's party honoring the youthful monarch. Place was the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

At least half an hour before the King arrived, those who were able to obtain cards flocked into the room in their flossiest finery. Young women guests who still cling to romantic fancies slyly practiced flirtatious glances. To beguile him for one moment, they thought, would be something to write home about.

Naturally, the youthful King who had the poise of a 30-year-old cosmopolite was the center of all eyes. But once the glances strayed, they shot straight to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby (General WAAC), who actually shared attention (unofficially) with the honor guest of the afternoon.

King Peter didn't tell Mrs. Hobby that her uniform was chic, but he did say he thought her WAAC was a splendid idea.

Impromptu Talk

Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia, who was questioned on all sides about the King, said that he would be in Washington several days longer, then go on to New York and other parts of the country. Also, she declared that His Majesty's speech this afternoon was "entirely impromptu."

That speech, by the way, warmed the spirit of his listeners. "I am sorry to be here for such an unlucky day for the whole world," said His Majesty. "But I hope to come again when things are happier for all. I am impressed with the friendliness of the American people." He paused, smiled shyly and sweetly, and added—"they're so . . . so unsophisticated!"

Later, a well known society editor pleasantly and gayly remarked: "Your Majesty, 'uninhibited' not 'unsophisticated' is the word."

To this His Majesty answered, "That's what I meant."

Miss Alice Eversman, president of Newspaper Women's Club of Washington, introduced the King. "You are a young King and we are a young country," she said.

Everywhere you turned everybody was asking "what did the King say to you?"

King Chats With Mrs. Smith

To Mrs. Bruce Smith, he chatted at length. In remarking to him that she thought Americans and Yugoslavs had a great deal in common he agreed—the war, warmth, responsiveness.

"Parts of your country even look like mine," declared the King. "Around Hot Springs, he added.

"Does it make you homesick, Your Majesty?" she asked.

"Yes," was his reply, with a smile

Mrs. George Barnett, to whom meeting royalty is no novelty, was there to exchange greetings with the King. (She's a cousin of the Duchess of Windsor.)

"Sweet, Boyish, Intelligent"

His Majesty noticed that Mrs. Barnett's arm was in a sling. He said nothing but with a concerned twinkle in his brown eyes appeared to say, "too bad."

When someone commented to King Peter that he seemed to have a good sense of humor, he quickly replied: "A sense of humor is necessary now, don't you think."

Consensus of the press and members who attended the party was "he's sweet, boyish, but very, very intelligent."

Prominent guests at the party in addition to those mentioned included the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Yugoslavia, Dr. Memello Nincic; the Minister of the Court of Yugoslavia, Dr. Radjoe Knezevio; the Minister of Yugoslavia, Dr. Constantin Fotitch; the New Zealand Minister, Walter Nash, and Mrs. Nash; Counselor of the Greek Legation, Philon A. Philon, and Mme. Philon; Mrs. Tom Connally, wife of Senator Connally; Mrs. James M. Boyer, jr.

Other guests of the club members were Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Mrs. Robert G. Merritt, Miss Elise Merritt, Miss Dorothy Parker, Miss Betty McStay, Miss Katherine Preston of New York, Mrs. Mary E. Buford, Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, Miss Evelyn Dillard, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Myron C. Cramer, Mrs. John J. Daly, Representative Percy Priest, Mrs. Lionel Atwill.

Still others seen at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. George Strawbridge, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Richard T. Coyner, Miss Emily Myers, Miss Margaret Tuckerman, Lieut. Col. Harry Schelmire, Mrs. W. E. Pattison French, Charles Mason Remey, Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Miss Mary Lord Andrews, Miss Helen Tucker Andres.

Also, Mrs. George Mesta, Miss Laura Berrien, Mrs. A. S. M. Monroney, Senator James J. Davis, Lieut. Col. Don Lowry, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillan, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Margaret Chase Smith, Lieut. Harold H. Latta, U. S. N.; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and Miss Martha Coker and scads and scads of others.

P. S.—Whispers went the rounds—this party is much more elaborate and glamorous than the Fourth Estate's gala event for the Duchess of Windsor. That, however, was a matter of personal opinion.

Social Hygiene Talks Urged For Schools

BELIEVING that the youth of the country are not well informed on the dangers and causes of venereal diseases, the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs went on record yesterday to have trained hygienists impart the subject to boys and girls in the D. C. High Schools.

In carrying out its program, the federation adopted this resolution; "Be it resolved, that the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs petition the Board of Education of the District of Columbia to require that properly qualified social hygienists present wholesome and intelligent information to classes of girls and boys separately in junior and senior high schools regarding the hazards of venereal infections; thus giving youth a means of protection against dangers to health, character and also safeguarding society in general."

At the morning session of the program the federation also adopted a resolution indorsing provisions of the bill S. 2597 in the United States Senate which provides for the appointment of chiropody and podiatry officers by the surgeon general.

Other Resolutions Adopted

The federation members pointed out that the boys in the service need professional foot care. Therefore, they heartily favor the granting of commissions to foot doctors.

Several other resolutions were adopted during the day. Among them was one recommending to Commissioner J. R. Young that he ease up the residence restriction ruling for the Division of Social Workers so that the serious handicap under which the Maternal Child Welfare and other bureaus have been functioning, might be removed.

Fifty dollars was voted to send the chairman of the federation's nutrition committee to a nutrition conference now in session at Blacksburg, Va. This is in accordance with the club's plans to go all-out for nutrition in its wartime program.

Mrs. Thorpe Speaks

Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the women's safety committee of the American Automobile Association, was the main speaker of the day. She suggested specific programs for working out the "share-your-car" program to facilitate transportation problems.

Mrs. Ellis Logan conducted a memorial program for deceased club members. Following the morning meeting, Mrs. Howard L. Hodkinson and Mrs. Henry F. Sawtelle, past presidents of the District of Columbia Federation, entertained other past presidents and special guests at a luncheon.

Cabin Cruiser to Be Home Of Mr., Mrs. Flanagan

House hunting, the problem of all newlyweds in Washington, will not bother James Arnold Flanagan, jr., and his bride, the former Miss Priscilla Scates, when they return from their honeymoon, for they will live aboard their cabin cruiser on the Potomac River. They will be "aboard the Mayme," 1300 Maine Avenue Southwest, Pier W, 31, after July 1.

The bride, who is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Eugene Scates of Enosburg Falls, Vt., was graduated from Norwich Academy, Simmons College and the Children's Hospital, Boston.

They were married in Washington, June 13, at the Twenty-ninth Street home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Harrison, with a reception after the ceremony, held in the garden. The Rev. Rufus W. Weaver officiated at the 5:30 o'clock ceremony.

The bride's wedding gown, made for her mother in 1904, was of ivory Oriental silk, made with a quaintly old-fashioned high-shirred neckline and a torso bodice joined to a full, flared skirt. Her veil, held in place with a tiara of orange blossoms, was old ivory Bruxelles silk Chantilly lace. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, stephanotis and roses.

Howard Trolley to Quit As Henderson's Assistant

Howard R. Trolley will resign as assistant to Leon Henderson to return to his old job as chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. . . . Office of Price Administration will call a halt to the hiring of new employes until Congress makes a decision on its new budget. OPA planned a staff of 8000 here—about twice its present number—but with the threatened big cut it may have to get along without increasing the staff. Aircraft and machine tool units of War Production Board's production division are expected to be retained in the shake-up that'll see most of the division sent to the Army.

Key Navy employes who can't be spared for long periods from their jobs have been ordered to take "frequent weekends" off if it doesn't interfere with their work. Naval officers are now given off two days at a time. Navy is limiting its civilian employs to 15 days' leave except in rare cases . . . Army plans to transfer a third of its officers out of Washington . . . Members of Congress are snapping at Leon Henderson because he failed to appoint some of their political friends to OPA jobs. They should read the OPA law that was written by the Congress. It forbids Henderson from inquiring into the politics of appointees. Now Leon is in bad for not breaking the law.

This is bad news. Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee has called off a tentatively scheduled meeting of his committee to consider the Administration's plan to pay Federal workers overtime after 40 hours. No meeting is planned and it's indefinite now when one will be held. The obstreperous postal workers are to blame. Their leaders—some of them—have refused to go along with the compromise proposal that would have guaranteed a minimum 10 per cent salary increase to all employes making below $3800. The postal workers, as a member explained, "want their cake and want to eat it, too." They carry a political wallop and nothing will be done until they change their tactics.

Time of the Essence

Action must be had swiftly on the pay bill or else tens of thousands of Federal workers won't be paid for overtime work after July 1. The authority for Army and Navy to pay overtime expires on that date. It's true that both the House and the Senate have passed different bills to extend this authority, but the inside word is that the President will veto whatever pay bill is sent unless it covers all the employes. The President is opposed to continuing the discrimination between Federal workers. However, if the Administration's pay plan gets stymied because of the demands of the postal groups, the President might be placed in a position of being forced to sign the Army and Navy bill. That would take the main heat off the Administration's plan, and the postal employes, along with all others who aren't now paid overtime, wouldn't get any increase for months, if then.

The Office of Agricultural War Relations is being decentralized. Several of its units are being transferred back to operating agencies and what's left will be taken over by the Food Requirements Board . . . Interior's Bureau of Mines has been reorganized on a war footing. Three regional offices are being set up at, Salt Lake City, Rolla, Mo., and College Park, Md. Dr. R. S. Dean has been appointed assistant to Dr. R. R. Sayers, the director . . . Federal Power Commission has concluded the "trial" of H. M. Thomas, personnel officer. No decision has been reached . . . BEW employes will take a ride on the mule-drawn barge up the canal tonight.

Elmer Davis probably is very surprised to find that he has only 2500 employes under him after reading reports that he would have at least 20,000. Here's the record: Office of Government Reports has 619 employes; Office of Facts and Figures, 350; Office of Emergency Management, 356, and the Foreign Information Service, 118. These employes are all in Washington. In the field are less than 1000. Reorganization of the four agencies into the Office of War Information probably will mean fewer employes . . . Joe Winslow has been moved up to assistant personnel director at FHA . . . M. S. Huberman has been appointed chief of the War Programs Section of the Antitrust Division.

Ducky Doo Lands in Clink

A character named Ducky Doo was arrested last night for disturbing the peace and incarcerated at Tenth Precinct Station. Neighbors had complained that Doo quacked too loud. Doo's erstwhile keeper, Mrs. Hattie Alexander, 1246 Columbia Road Northwest, agreed. She said the duck had been presented to her daughter at Easter and she had been trying to give him away.

A New Bird Sanctuary

Five itinerant ducks were "apprehended" yesterday on New Hampshire Avenue by Takoma Park (Md.) Police, who, after failing to locate an owner, took them to Sligo Creek. The five were joined by two more ducks, given by Lee Mannekee, of Geneva Avenue.

Defense Units Get Behind Scrap Drive

Head of Chemurgy Firm Says He Can Produce Ample Rubber for Nation

Washington's 66 civilian defense area committees last night threw their support behind the District's lagging scrap rubber campaign a few hours after Dr. William J. Hale, head of a chemurgy firm, told a House Mining Subcommittee that with 100 million dollars, men and priorities he could produce all the rubber the Nation needs in a year.

Horace Walker, executive secretary of the District Salvage Committee, met a "gratifying response" when he went before a meeting of civilian defense chairmen in the Chamber of Commerce Building and urged them to spread word of the rubber campaign and the need for maximum cooperation on the part of each citizen.

From Walker, the chairmen received some 200,000 leaflets, outlining the purpose and setup of the rubber drive, which will be distributed throughout their respective areas by the messenger services and other volunteers.

Visions 100 Plants

Dr. Hale, former organic chemistry professor at the University of Michigan and now consultant to the Dow Chemical Co. and president of the National Argol Co. here, told the subcommittee he would set up about 100 plants—about two in each State — each turning out 45,000 pounds of butadiene daily from certain types of corn.

Another 150 million dollars would be required by the rubber industry to make rubber from the butadiene, he said, adding that his synthetic product would make tires superior to those now in use.

"We can produce rubber for probably 15 cents a pound from waxey maize and grain sorghums, and you can always make it cheaper as you progress," he asserted. "It can be made in enormous quantities at a very small cost and not even disturb the surplus corn crop.

"One hundred and fifty million bushels of corn will produce all the rubber we can possibly use, and that's not 5 per cent of the crop."

He bitterly criticized the War Production Board with the exception of Chairman Donald M. Nelson.

Seeks to See President

In response to questioning by Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, Hale said Secretary of Agriculture Wickard is "beginning to see the light," but the only hope of furthering the corn rubber process is to "see the President himself."

America, he declared, can make all its gasoline and rubber from farm crops by following his theory of chemurgy.

Meanwhile, the charity organizations whose collections were supposed to boost Washington's discouraging rubber collection totals turned in disappointing reports. Depositories at fire and police stations were found to be "not very productive" and contributions at shoe shops were mostly made by the proprietors themselves.

Exhibit on Display

An exhibit of salvageable rubber articles, arranged by 14 women's organizations comprising the women's division of the salvage committee, will be on display today at 1420 H Street Northwest.

Among the speakers at last night's meeting were Whitney Leary, OPA Administrator for the District; Conrad Van Hyning, chief of the civilian mobilization service; Commissioner John Russell Young; Col. Lemuel Bolles, civilian defense director, and J. Bernard McDonald, publicity director in Colonel Bolles' office.

Capt. Groves Will Retire; Police Veteran

Police Capt. Hugh H. Groves, commander of the Eleventh Precinct, has been ordered retired by the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons, effective next Tuesday, The Post learned last night.

Continued ill-health from injuries suffered in an automobile accident last March led the doctors to decide the genial captain is unfit for further duty. His retirement will terminate 34 years of police service. He is 61.

Groves suffered a back injury when an automobile he was riding in collided with a bus March 6. He went on sick leave four days later and has not worked since that time.

He appeared before the medical examiners 10 days ago and his retirement was approved June 19, to become effective June 30.

Groves, who lives at 1014 Spring Road Northwest, was appointed to the police force March 10, 1908, and was mounted on a bicycle. He served as a bicycle man, was mounted on horseback and as a motorcycle patrolman until after he was made a sergeant in August, 1920.

Five years later he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant and five years after that attained his present rank. As a captain he served as commanding officer of the Eighth, Second, Fifth, Twelfth and Eleventh Precincts.

Swarms of Japanese Beetles Invade D. C. Flower Gardens

WAR ON THE VICTORY GARDEN FRONT—Mrs. Sylvia Goodman, 3016 M Place Southeast, slaps a Jap beetle into a jar. Rose Marie Clements, 10, helps her neighbor pick the insects off tomato plants

Among other troubles Japanese, hundreds of thousands of Japanese beetles have come to visit us. Their number seems unprecedented and they're doing busines at the same old stand, chewing up flowers and fastidiously looking over vegetable gardens, where, being very silly insects, they prefer rhubarb and beans to strawberries.

People in Southeast Washington, where the beetles first made their appearance here some 12 years ago, fought droves of them yesterday with sprays and even with their hats. The beetles are so thick there now that they can be fought with bats in certain areas, and around M Place Southeast are so thick they can be shooed off the flowers. They get down the necks of people's clothes and try to make nests in their hair.

Agriculture Department scientists said the incursion is city-wide and extends into the adjoining rural areas for another farm problem. It's a little too early, as yet, to know just how serious the visitation will be because the beetles haven't indicated in what numbers they will come. But with the hundreds of thousands already on hand, it looks as if it's bound to get worse.

Marlene Dietrich, Air Cavalcade Arrive Today to Sell Bonds

An air cavalcade, including a German Messerschmitt, a British Beaufighter and a Spitfire, a Bell Aircobra and other planes, and Marlene Dietrich will arrive in Washington today and will participate in a great rally tomorrow at the National Airport to sell war bonds and stamps.

Scheduled to begin at 4 p. m., the rally will include a color guard of Boy and Girl Scouts, American Legionnairies and Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Army Air Forces' Band, and a glider exhibit. Col. Harry C. Fraser, chaplain of the Army Air Forces, will deliver the invocation.

On a Nation-wide tour, the planes will arrive at the airport at 2 p. m. today and remain until June 29. The plane exhibit is also designed to encourage enlistment in the Aviation Cadet Enlisted Reserve. Officers will be on hand to answer questions.

Miss Dietrich, who has been on a "Jeep Tour," will arrive at Union Station at 8:20 a. m. today.

She will appear at several department stores today and tomorrow and advance the sale of war bonds.

Ad Club Issues War Communication

The Advertising Club of Washington, through President Louis D. Krakow, last night issued the following "war communication:"

We of the advertising fraternity, media, worker, president, partner, stockholder, and all interested in these essential means of communication, are reminded of the importance of being ever on the alert. That is life at its best.

New advertising fronts must be opened up every day, especially now with our country being keyed to its natural state, the offensive.

You are therefore urged to attend the opening of the newest front, the Whiteout for Victory Drive opening on the steps of the District Building, from 12 noon to 12:30 p. m. next Tuesday, that you may lend your support first by your presence and also in promoting the use of all-media copy for the Whiteout for Victory that will be held in every retail establishment in America from 12 noon to 12:15 on Wednesday.

Let us give the Whiteout for Victory Drive and all official causes "the works," that more Treasury War Bonds and Stamps may be sold.

Advertising has no more treasured possession in all the world than the people and Government of the United States of America. You know that.

Advertisers, it is thus up to you to promote your country's interests well, for the enemy would like nothing better than to send you to a very bad place.

LOUIS D. KRAKOW, PRESIDENT THE ADVERTISING CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

Alley Entrance Numbers Required

Does the back or side entrance of your home show your house number?

If it doesn't, you had better see about getting one, "at least two inches in height," for the benefit of air raid wardens.

During last week's blackout, wardens found themselves in a dither, especially if their back-alley observations disclosed an illuminated dwelling.

Unable, in most cases, to get in back entrances to warn residents, the wardens had to go to the front. With no number in the back or side to guide them to the correct street address, they were stymied.

One of them reported he had to count to the middle of a block three times in order to get the right house when he went to the front door to arouse occupants.

More than one warden experienced the same difficulty. One apparently turned to the law for a remedy—and found one.

He came up with a moldy ordinance which provides that all back or side entrances to any District establishment be identified with numbers "at least two inches in height" corresponding with the street house number.

The next step took the wardens to the chief of police, asking for enforcement of the regulation that no policeman ever heard of.

Result: An order to all precinct commanders from Maj. Edward J. Kelly. He instructed them to make a survey and inform citizens of the regulation and make certain the numbers appear forthwith.

Volunteers Needed for Gas Listing

District Employes May Be Asked to Aid; Second Registration Slated July 9, 10, 11

District Government employes may be called upon to assist in the second gasoline rationing registration to be held July 9, 10, 11, the District Rationing Board announced last night.

About 10 per cent of the 2300 teachers who had volunteered to handle the registration when it was originally announced for the first three days of the month are expected to be out of town during the postponed registration dates. Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chief of the civilian defense volunteer bureau, will be called upon for some volunteer workers, and the Commissioners will be asked to supply the rest from District employes.

Emphasizing that no teacher will be called upon to disorganize her summer plans to help in the registration, the Rationing Board said letters were being sent to those who conducted the first registration to find out how many would be available in July.

The alphabetical order in which motorists will register will have to be revised, because the last day of the postponed schedule is a Saturday when the school-houses will be open only a half day. On Thursday and Friday the registration will be conducted from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. and on Saturday from 7 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Women to Form Share-Car Club

Initial steps toward organization of share-your-car groups among residents of Reservoir Road Northwest between Colony Hill and Thirty-sixth Street were taken yesterday at a meeting of some 35 women at the home of Mrs. Anne Archbold, 3905 Reservoir Road.

Six of the women agreed to alternate use of their cars on shopping trips, all made plans to double up in work on recreational projects and one, a baseball fan, offered to share her car to baseball games.

Thoughts of Parents in Prague Mar Tours of Symphony Guest

GUEST CONDUCTOR AND PIANIST at tonight's Watergate concert will be Sir Ernest MacMillan and Lubka Kolessa, shown looking over their scores

Lubka Kolessa, the pianist who will appear as guest artist at the Watergate symphony concert tonight, has been supremely happy on this side of the ocean except for those piercing moments when she wonders what has become of her father and mother in Prague.

Those moments of doubt—which Kolessa describes as the worst agony one can know—have accumulated within her until she says she cannot stand much longer not to hear from her parents.

Her father is Dr. Alexander Kolessa, professor of languages, folklore and literature at the University of Prague. She last saw him on the day of her marriage in Prague, in February, 1939. Her mother, whom Kolessa says sacrificed tremendously to get her ahead in music, she last saw in May, 1939. She has had no letter from either since 1940.

Kolessa came here from Canada, where she went from England in 1940. She can't remember when she was not sitting before the piano. She studied at the Imperial Academy of Art and Music in Vienna; when 14 she was awarded the academy's highest recognition—a grand piano. At 15 she toured Europe, performing in all the capitals. When she thinks of the success she has gained she thinks of her father and mother who made it possible, and can hardly bear the silence, now in its second year.

Conducting will be Sir. Ernest MacMillan, the first Canadian to be knighted for service to music, and present conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. He has made public appearances, as organist, since he was 10 years old.

When the World War I broke out he was seized in Germany and confined, with other political prisoners, until the war ended. Residing in a race track stable, he gained his Doctor of Music from Oxford University, the censors, indulgently, permitting his thesis to pass.

Now, he finds Canadians, with another war in progress, filling the concert halls and reacting increasingly to Russian music, which, he said, was always more or less popular there. He finds them accepting the ups and downs of the war with good spirits and liking Winston Churchill, whether reverses come or whether things go well.

Better Fare Is Promised Glenn Dale

Complaints Result Of High Food Costs, Lack of Personnel, Health Officer Says

Patients at Glenn Dale Sanitarium, who complained to a Senate committee about the "revolting" food and poor service that accompanied it, will get better fare July 1.

After making an inspection of the institution yesterday, Deputy Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger reported the complaints were the results of increased food costs and difficulties in obtaining trained dietary department personnel.

Stating he "found nothing to give cause for serious alarm," the health officer added there is room for improvement in both the quality of food, and the service.

Dr. Seckinger reported "we will be able to make the food more palatable when the new District budget becomes effective July 1. The budget increases the ration allotment per person from 41 to 52 cents per day."

Meanwhile, plans for the Senate-ordered investigation matured yesterday in conferences between the Commissioners and Renah F. Camalier, Senate District Committee counsel, who is directing the probe.

Acting on a request by Chairman McCarran for prompt action, Camalier disclosed that the first step would be taken within a few days, when an inspection party, probably composed of committee representatives and the Board of Commissioners, is scheduled to inspect the institution. Health Department officials probably will be included in the group.

New Star Is Introduced At the Capitol This Week

'This Gun for Hire' Is Distinguished By Performance of Newcomer Alan Ladd; All-Star Stage Revue Scores a Hit

"THIS GUN FOR HIRE." Paramount picturization of a story by Graham Greene, adapted to the screen by Albert Maltz and W. R. Burnett, co-starring Veronica Lake and Robert Preston and introducing Alan Ladd, supported by Laird Cregar, Tully Marshall, Mikail Rasumny, Marc Lawrence, Roger Imhof, Pamela Blake, Harry Shanon, Ferguson, Bernadene Hayes, James Farley and Virita Campbell. Directed by Frank Tuttle. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

"THIS GUN FOR HIRE," screen feature for the new week at Loew's Capitol Theater, manages to impart freshness, excitement and high suspense to an old and familiar story.

It accomplishes this minor miracle by making its central figure more a study of character than of wanton crime and shrouding his motive sufficiently to arouse acute curiosity and maintain unflagging interest. It even goes so far as to suggest that there are times when some doubt may attach to the hoary preachment that "crime does not pay" and the common fallacy that sympathy must be wholly wasted on an embittered young man who vends murder like a legitimate commodity of trade.

The picture opens with a cold-blooded shooting. The motive is not clear, beyond the fact that some sort of important chemical formula is involved. The uses to which that formula was to have been put and the manner in which it led to further killings are revealed gradually and with cumulative melodramatic effect as the development of the Graham Greene fable, so admirably adapted to the screen by Albert Maltz and W. R. Burnett, progresses. The killer is after the master minds in an ominous bit of skullduggery and the law is after the killer. It all creates an extremely vicious circle that spins out a uniquely gripping series of events kept moving at high speed by a vividly contrasted set of characters.

This contrast is carried even to the divided affections of the girl in the case. This enticing young night club performer is enamored of Michael Crane, of police headquarters, but unwittingly becomes the only one able to form any sort of just appraisal of the desperate fellow he is trying to track down. Her perception of virtues in his oddly homicidal nature is communicated to the audience. This Philip Raven wasn't such a bad guy as his record made him out. He proves it in the end, just before the police bullets mow him down.

To the pivotal role of Raven, Alan Ladd, sprung suddenly from obscurity to the heights by the penetrating quality of his performance in this single picture, brings abilities not quite like those of any other of the cinema's bad men. He is a grim, relentless sort of chap, whose strange instincts are best revealed by his kindness to homeless kittens and eager willingness to sell his gun for murder to the highest bidder. If the highest bidder turns out to be someone who ought to be rubbed out, too, that also can be easily arranged with his conscience. To the portrayal of this complex mental, moral and spiritual derangement, Ladd brings the quiet skill of a veteran. His every violent act is lent the sinister power of calm and deliberate underemphasis. Death occupies a low place in his estimate of human values. Without Ladd for a pivot, "This Gun for Hire" would be pretty tawdry, run-of-the-mill "cops-and-robbers."

Killer Plays Against Nice Background

While Alan Ladd virtually makes the picture, he is ably assisted by a competent cast of far wider renown. The nominal stars are Veronica Lake and Robert Preston, with Miss Lake the more deserving of the honor of the two. Miss Lake, it is developing, has considerably more to commend her than that blind of blond hair. She does nicely in her present role and embellishes her performance with a couple of catchy songs that are catchily sung. Mr. Preston is merely a very routine "cop." Not so pedestrian is Laird Cregar, as the jellyfish "front" of the arch plotters, whose seditious enterprises give the film the advantage of a helpful and valuable timeliness. Mr. Cregar is cast in a role that no one could be proud of, unless he could perform it with Mr. Cregar's fine display of chicken-heartedness. The patriarchal Tully Marshall is another cast in an obnoxious part, who makes his evil impulses something of note. And Marc Lawrence, as Mr. Cregar's subservient chauffeur, is still another who gives the picture a bit of zing. By and large, "This Gun for Hire" is no soporific.

Neither is new "Blackouts of 1942" stage revue. Here is a melange of comedy, music and dancing that is thickly sprinkled with stardust, geared to high speed and precisely what yesterday's first audience seemed to have ordered. With the antic Jay C. Flippen mastering the unceremonious ceremonies and such luminaries as Jane Pickens, Horace MacMahon, of the films; Eleanore Whitney, Eddie Hanley and the Rhythm Rockets on hand to answer his beck and call, something is going on—or coming off—every second. Mr. Flippen was in fine fettle yesterday, making even the oldest of his gags seem surprisingly new. Miss Pickens was in such excellent voice that she virtually "stopped the show" and Miss Whitney added still further luster to her reputation as a dancer and comedienne. The Messrs. MacMahon and Hanley were strong supports to the flip Flippen on the comedy side and the Rockets have never been better.

Sam Jack Kaufman's "Cole Porter Hits" overture, with Lynn Allison for the vocals; Art Brown's tumultuously cheered exercise of the triple-manual and audience vocal organs, and the Fox Movietone News round out a rich and meaty three hours of entertainment.

'Smash Hit' Opens Willard Roof

By Ernest L. Schier

To the accompaniment of mingled boos, catcalls and cheers, Harry P. Somerville last night unveiled the Willard Hotel Roof Music Hall. In an atmosphere of lavender and old lace, an imported New York cast is presenting a revival of that old-time melodrama to which our parents and grandparents thrilled; that tremendous success of two continents, that "Tobacco Road" of the nineteenth century, "East Lynne."

From the moment you are whisked by elevator to the top of the Willard until the last strains of "Down By the Old Mill Stream" ring out, you will find yourself in another world. A world that is filled with the swishing of crinoline gowns and the pop of gas lamps as the lamplighter makes his rounds.

Mustachioed villains and unfortunate heroines are having a theatrical field day as audiences give vent to all emotions, which the management assures us will be "unrestrained." Indeed, hissing and applauding are as much a part of the performance as the actors' lines and studied movements. In 5 acts and 12 scenes, "East Lynne" follows the tragic career of our heroine from her ecstatic marriage to the noble Archibald Carlyle to her downfall at the hands of that dastardly villain, St. Francis Levinson. You will thrill to the beautiful expression of Archibald's love for the lovely Lady Isabel and gnash your teeth as you see through the trickery and veneer of the black-hearted Sir Francis. Ladies are warned to come well supplied with handkerchiefs to absorb the tears which are sure to come as they view the tragic Isabel living alone and disgraced in a garret in Paris. And again as she returns unrecognized in time to be at her son's deathbed, just prior to her unhappy demise. Strong-hearted men will stand up and cheer when the good Archibald Carlyle proclaims his forgiveness for all of Isabel's wrongdoings, and sit back with satisfaction as the arm of the law finally reaches out for the evil Francis Levinson. It was difficult to determine at last night's opening of the play who had the better time, the actors or the audience.

Under the exceedingly clever direction of Richard Midgley the cast made the most of every line and bit of action. Eyes were rolled and mustaches twirled with a polish that comes only from hard work and experience in the theater. Lack of space prohibits mention of the cast, led by Jane Middleton, but all concerned did a swell job. Entr' acte entertainment was supplied by various members of the cast who sang such well-known songs of the horse-and-buggy era as "She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage" and that rowdy-dowdy favorite, "To-Ra-Ra-Ra-Boom-De-Ay." In this capacity Bibi Osterwald, popular favorite of local audiences, scored a personal triumph.

Settings, in the back drop fashion, were designed by Charles Squire and added much to the minute stage upon which the actors performed. Tables with red-checkered coverings have been set up in music hall style at which the patrons may hold sway and their glasses. To complete the atmosphere, beer and soft drinks may be had by those who will, along with an abundance of peanuts and pretzels.

To those who seek escape from the hot evenings, we suggest a visit to the Willard Roof where an unparalleled good time may be had by all, comfortably fanned by balmy summer zephyrs.

"East Lynne" will be performed evenings only at 8:45 and will be succeeded at a later date by an equally famous "tear-jerker."

The Gun Served Them Valiantly

VERONICA LAKE AND ROBERT PRESTON

as the night club girl and the officer of the law, who afford the romantic interest in Paramount's production of "This Gun for Hire," now on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. But it is Alan Ladd who gives the picture the thrill of a new star in the making by a performance that places him immediately in the front rank of the cinema's killers. The supporting cast is of uniformly high caliber—just like the gun!

HEDDA HOPPER

Barry Nicely Parried

Hollywood, Calif., June 25. When Rosalind Russell met Philip Barry at the David Selznicks for dinner the other night, he said, "Where have you been all my life? Why haven't you done a play for me?" To which Roz replied, "Cause you wouldn't have me. I got in to see you once, but your thoughts were elsewhere. You certainly wasted no time on me."

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Barry, a bit taken back, said, "Well, I'll have to rectify that at once, 'cause I'm going to write a play for you this coming winter."

So, if all goes well, and he turns out a good one, we may be losing Roz to Broadway. However, she's got so many pictures lined up that it may be a long time before she gets around to it. Anyway, here's hoping.

And if Army life permits, Capt. Thornton Wilder of the Army intelligence will write a play for Fredric March.

Studios never go out of their way to become philanthropists, but it often happens by accident. Swedish Signe Hasso was under contract to R.-K.-O. a year and a half. They hired teachers so she could learn English. She had all sorts of training. They never gave her a part. Now Metro's picked her up on a contract, and she'll play with Bob Young and Laraine Day in "Journey for Margaret."

"Beautiful But Broke" has Jinx Falkenburg, Joan Davis, and Marguerite Chapman in the lineup. You know, these youth pictures are kind of refreshing. The girls don't do much acting. They stick in a lot of muscle and always get good troupers like Joan to support the kids.

Edgar Bergen will be heading for Army camps in either Hawaii or Alaska just as soon as he finishes "Here We Go Again." He and Charlie are also making a series of training shorts for nurses. Maybe at long last Charlie offered himself as splints for a good purpose.

And if that happens, Bergen won't be earning $282,000 next year—and then what will our Government do for income?

Buddy Rogers has gone to Pensacola, Fla. Mary Pickford will follow as soon as she's well enough. Mary's been suffering lately from a gall stone, and they can be mightly painful.

Herbert Baker, Belie's son, has written four parodies for Kitty Carlisle which she'll sing at camp shows. Titles are: "Sleepy Platoon," "Bruise in the Night." "Recruit with a Zoot Suit," "Three Little Blisters."

Producer Ralph Dietrich will do the first picture about women in war, to be called "Women with Wings." In one plant here, employes are practically 100 per cent women. They put together, test, and fly planes. I know that with the shortage of leading men, they'd turn to women sooner or later. I'm glad it's sooner.

John Craven telephoned Father Frank Craven from the East to say he was opening in Provincetown with Jane Cowl in "Candida."

Ben Hecht's writing a story that may bring Tallulah Bankhead back to pictures.

'Tis reported that Lana Turner's mother will in the near future marry Lana's manager. If that isn't keeping it in the family, I don't know what it.

Cary Grant, who started his career as a dancer, will do a bit of it in "Once Upon a Honeymoon," while Dancer Ginger Rogers looks on.

So She Laughed!

ALMA CARROLL,

first chosen as "Miss National Defense," was whipped around a coast-to-coast tour of the Army camps, then signed by Columbia Pictures. So you'll be seein' her in "Parachute Nurse" and "They All Kissed the Bride"

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, June 25.

Billy Rose the Mount Kisco farmer, took his wife, Eleanor Holm, to visit their neighbor, Max Dreyfuss. The latter is the song publisher who discovered George Gershwin. The barns at his farm feature some of the best known livestock in America. Squire Rose therefore was anxious to learn from Dreyfuss a few facts about operating a farm . . . "Hello," the publisher greeted them. "Have a drink. Which would you like to have—a glass of milk, or a glass of champagne?" . . . Rose was startled by this choice. . . . "It really doesn't matter—a glass of milk or a glass of champagne," Dreyfuss confessed. "They both cost me the same."

ELEANOR HOLM

Contrary to the front-page reports, Al Smith hasn't returned to Tammany Hall. The only thing he knows about his Tammany "comeback" is what he's read in the papers. Smith was invited to be a delegate at the Democratic State convention, but declined . . . Washington reporters expect to have another story about the gubernatorial campaign in New York, because they've learned that Smith is on Roosevelt's visit list at the White House this week . . . The records of the Authors League show that Winston Churchill and Roosevelt were its first president and vice president—Churchill, the novelist, and Theodore Roosevelt . . . King George II is surfeited with official dinners. "My best dinner was at the Starlight Roof," he confides, "when I was alone."

Lucius Beebe has a rare collection of Edward Arlington Robinson letters and manuscripts. His will bequeathe these precious documents to Yale University . . . Two weeks ago Beebe decided to present them to Yale now, instead of after his death. He therefor packed the Arlington papers, and sent them off to Yale . . . From Prof. Chauncey Brewster Tinker, Beebe received a letter of acknowledgement. "Many thanks, but you included one item which I don't believe belongs in the Robinson letters," he wrote. "And that is your exquisite and profusely illustrated copy of 'Fanny Hill.'"

Re Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army Show": The first-act finale will be a salute to the U. S. Navy . . . The box-office reports $30,000 in premiums collected to date . . . Gypsy Rose Lee and Vera Zorina presented their costumes to the two soldiers who will impersonate them. Gypsy is also instructing the show's stripteaser who mimics her . . . The first seating problem of the show is how to get the 50-piece Army orchestra into the pit, which seats only 42 . . . One of the songs featured in the show, "With My Head in the Clouds," was written by Berlin at the suggestion of General Arnold, head of the Air Corps.

The Japanese Gardens at Rockefeller Center have been torn up. A. N. Van Den Hoeck, the chief horticulturist at Rockefeller Center, asked M. Lincoln Schuster for suggestions regarding a substitute—a Chinese garden . . . Upon the advice of the book publisher, Van Den Hoeck will have the construction of new Chinese garden supervised by Lin Yutang, Pearl Buck and probably Dr. Hu Shih.

The Duke of Windsor is on the wagon. During his stay at the Waldorf, the only night-cap he's ordered is hot milk . . . George Abbott, who discovered Diosa Costello at La Conga, will sign Doc Marcus, the magician now at that night club, for his new musical, "Beat the Band" . . . "Gardenia Joe," the movie about Army life, is encountering difficulty. The Army won't approve its release, because it slights the Army food and entertainment . . . Paul Gallico, who wrote "Pride of the Yankees," was asked about the acting talents of Gary Cooper, who plays the role of left-handed Lou Gehrig. "Is it true that Cooper is such a good actor that he plays Gehrig, although he's not left-handed?" Gallico answered: "It's true he's a good actor—because Cooper isn't even right-handed."

Private Joe Cook, jr., who will do an impersonation of his illustrious father, in "This Is the Army," is having disputes with Joe Cook, sr., about which of the latter's routines should be included. They disagree concerning which were the best Cook numbers . . . Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson, whose Gubernatorial boom dropped quickly in 1936, didn't approve of his being listed by Senator Mead among the Democratic possibilities this year. Jackson prefers to remain on the bench . . . The newest gadgets in town are silver rings, in which are set round pieces of solid rubber . . . One of the last Americans to leave Paris reports that Goering now wears his military decorations on the left side, and Cartier clips on the right.

Palace

Having failed to exhaust Washington's interest in two capacity weeks, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of John Steinbeck's "Tortilla Flat" sails triumphantly along into its third consecutive week at Loew's Palace Theater.

With Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr, John Garfield, Frank Morgan and Akim Tamiroff heading the cast, it would not be extraordinary for even a mediocre picture to enjoy more than a normal run. But "Tortilla Flat" is not a mediocre picture. It is, as a matter of fact, unique in characterization, unsual in incident and development and so pungent in its commentary on human foibles, social maladjustments and the attitude of the "haves" toward the "have-nots" that it stands quite apart from the conventional, run-of-the-mine "movie." Furthermore, its locale is quaint and the production one that reflects not only occasional visual beauty, but unfailingly the mood and purpose of the pictured episode.

Instead of acting honors going to Spencer Tracy in this subject, they rightfully belong to Frank Morgan and Akim Tamiroff. And instead of the stars monopolizing the entire interest, it is sufficiently widespread to embrace also such fine supporting players as Allen Jenkins, Sheldon Leonard, John Qualen and a long list of others—not to mention a pack of extremely intelligent canine actors.

As must have been suspected by now, "Tortilla Flat" is something to see.

Columbia

The tunes and customs of a bygone era are revived in a new musical romance by Victor Mature and Rita Hayworth as they gayly glide through "My Gal Sal," being shown currently at Loew's Columbia Theater. The screen play was largely created by Theodore Dreiser and is based on the life of his brother, Paul Dreiser, who wrote so many of the songs that were popular at the turn of the century. The two stars are seen as a song writer and an actress of considerable popularity, whose love is expressed in terms of stormy strife one minute and billing and cooing the next.

"Banks of the Wabash" and "My Gal Sal" are two of the many old songs that are featured which bring to the picture reminiscent moments of days when life was geared to a slower pace and people had more time to enjoy the simple things.

Some excellent supporting work is done by James Gleason, as a continually harried publisher, and John Sutton, as the disappointed suitor for the hand of la Hayworth. Victor Mature turns in a remarkably good performance as the impulsive composer, while Rita Hayworth continues more and more to shine as brightly as a Christmas tree ornament.

Norwegian Paces College Golf Field

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, June 25.—The shame of the American League is exposed today with the announcement that of the 25 players chosen for the league's All-Star team, no fewer than nine are Yankees. That's roughly 35 per cent of the league-wide All-Star talent coming from one team, and a heluva reflection on the rest of the league.

POVICH

There can be no quarrel with the team as chosen, nor the selection of nine Yankees for the lineup that will oppose the National League All-Stars on July 6. Because the league is sincere in presenting its best front, the nine Yankees were picked. But it illustrates the complete subjection of the rest of the league to Yankee skill.

The Red Sox have been given four places on the squad, and the Tigers and Indians three each. But merely from among the Yankee pitching staff, three have been chosen—Ruffing, Bonham and Chandler. And the fact is that some teams are represented on the All-Star squad purely by honorary members who were chosen under the rule that at least one player from each club in the league must be selected.

The league can be justly proud of the Yankees as a super club, perhaps, but there can be small pride-taking in any such lopsided league balance as the All-Star choices demonstrate. For example, on a squad that contains three catchers, the Yankees are providing two—Bill Dickey and Buddy Rosar, meaning that the Yankees' second string catcher is better than the regular catchers of six other clubs in the league.

An All-Star selection that will meet with unqualified approval everywhere is that of Edgar Smith, of the Chicago White Sox, the hard luck pitcher of the league whose reverses have not dimmed the appreciation of his fine pitching this year.

It was a sporting and also a logical gesture for the league managers who picked the team to name Smith, despite the fact that his record reads "one victory and ten defeats." He inherits the distinction of being the owner of the worst pitching record ever honored with an All-Star berth, but it's a record that, on closer scrutiny is one of the best in the league. During the stretch in which Smith lost ten stright ball games, two were by 1-0 scores, and one was a two-hitter which he lost. Smith's selection is his due.

The American League is prepared, evidently, to take its chances with right-handed pitching against the National League on July 6 at the Polo Grounds. Smith is the only left hander among the squad of nine American League pitchers.

Heretofore, the All-Star squads have included only six pitchers, but the limit has been raised this year to take care of the possibility that the team may have to play two games in two days. The winner, you know, will get the assignment to play the Army-Navy All-Stars piloted by Lieut. Mickey Cochrane, and featuring Bob Feller, at Cleveland on July 7. And under All-Star game rules, each pitcher is limited to three innings.

The nine All-Star games of history have been a bright chapter of big league thrills, commencing with the first All-Star game in 1933 at Chicago where Connie Mack and the late John McGraw managed the contending clubs. That was the day when Babe Ruth cemented his reputation for rising to the occasion with the home run epic that everybody had come to see.

At the Polo Grounds in 1934, it was Carl Hubbell who put on the individual show with his amazing strikeout feat. That was the day when he struck out Gehrig, Ruth, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin, in succession, with only Cronin getting as much as a foul.

Jimmy Foxx slammed a home run at Cleveland in 1935 to give the American League its third straight victory in the All-Star series, and at Boston in 1936, the National League finally crashed through. That was the debut of Joe DiMaggio in the All-Star series and a dismal debut it was for him. Gabby Hartnett slammed a triple through DiMaggio's legs in right field to win the game for the National League, 4-3. DiMaggio was hitless at bat.

At Washington in 1937, Earl Averill hit Dizzy Dean with a line drive on his big toe, and Dean always has said that it started the end of his pitching career. Dean said that he hurt his arm trying to favor the injury he received that day. In 1938, Mace Brown struck out Rudy York with the bases full in the ninth, and the National Leaguers won, 4-1. In 1939, Joe Gordon's double-play feats behind Bobby Feller saved that game for the American Leaguers and in 1940, the National won when Max West hit a three-run homer in the first inning, with the A. L. getting only three hits.

Last year, at Detroit, it was Ted Williams stealing the show with his ninth-inning homer with two out that wiped out the National's 2-run lead. It has been, without fail, a thrill game.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 25.—SPORTIN' AROUND:

Bob Feller, in all probability, will be the first prominent sports figure now in service to be sent abroad . . . but soon . . . further proof that all is well again in the Joe DiMaggio household was Mme. DiMag's honest joy over news of Joe's slump-breaking triple and two singles in St. Louis the other night . . . the Braves auctioned off their home plate for the benefit of Army-Navy relief. Well, why not? They weren't using it.

CONSIDINE

That was a surprising thing Corpl. Joe Louis told us as his train pulled out for Fort Riley—that his huge income tax bill had been put off until the end of the war. And here we were passionately beating our breast over his inability to pay . . . the managers of Ray Robinson, the welterweight flash, say we're all wet when we write that Ray will become the property of Julian Black and John Roxborough. The present managers have Ray tied up like a kidnapped contortionist. If there is any change in management, Ray will go to the biggest manager of fighters—Uncle Sam . . . Dan Topping, president of the football Dodgers, is headed for the ferry command. He's an expert pilot.

MacArthur Gets a P-40 From Sports

Well, the big Cleveland fight show raised $25,000 toward buying a bomber for MacArthur. That won't buy a bomber, but it will buy a P-40, or a Navy dive bomber, either of which would be appreciated by the Gen. . . . Hank Danning asks, "Is it possible for a pitcher to hurl a no-hit, no-run game, and for the opposing batters not to lose a single percentage point in their batting?" Seems that it is, and that it did happen—when Bob Feller pitched a no-hitter against the White Sox on the opening day of the 1940 season.

If you don't think there's a new deal at Ohio State since Francis Schmidt left, just read the papers. Seven outstanding gridders were declared scholastically ineligible for the 1942 season. . . . That was a good crack of Jim Tobin's when Jimmy Wilson said to him, "You're big enough and strong enough to pitch every day." Jim said, "Sure I am, but do you want me to lose 40 games a season?" . . . Herbert Bayard Swope changed the mind of the Administration about stopping New York race trains.

Durocher on Medwick: "He's the Medwick of 1933 and 1934. I think he began to get back his old confidence when they started feeding us left-handers, trying to stop Camilli, Reiser and Walker. Then we got a few slow right-handers in succession, and he kept hitting. Now he's taking the kind of cuts he took when he was with the Cardinals" . . . They say Babe Ruth is wonderful in the Gehrig film. . . . "I don't think I'll have much use for these," Capt. Bob Jones said as he reported to Mitchel Field with his golf clubs among his baggage . . . Not that he'll ever retreat, but how the Italian Army would love to have Uncle Sam's latest sports recruit: Barney Ewell, Penn State's champion sprinter.

Doughboys to Battle Par—Gratis

The New York City Park Department has thrown open ten of its municipal golf courses to men in uniform—no greens fees. . . . A Lou Gehrig fan calls us to task for writing recently that Lou was among the great batters who failed to reach the 3,000-hit class, as Paul Waner did the other day. He points out that Lou made 2,721 hits in 13 seasons, and had six or seven years left in him when he was struck down. . . . Well-liked Jimmy Corcoran is now sports editor of the Chicago Herald-American, succeeding Ed Cochrane, who will advance to New York with INS after completing his job as technical adviser to the film about Jim Corbett. . . . Jockey Linberg was turned down by the Army when he tried to enlist. Twenty pounds too light. He couldn't get over it, figuring that if he's strong enough to haul a thousand-pound horse around, he's strong enough to pull a half-trigger.

Seabiscuit's first crop, mostly fillies, will come East to the races soon. . . . Whirlaway, who climbs to within one good race of Seabiscuit's all-time record earnings when he wins the Brooklyn this Saturday, has solemnly pledged that 10 per cent of this future earnings will go into War Bonds. Smart nag.

Ubiquitous Wins Suffolk Feature

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 25.—Coming from far back in the last sixteenth, Arnold Hanger's Ubiquitous, a 13 to 1 outsider, just got up to win the $1,500 Patriot allowance mile for 3-year-olds today at Suffolk Downs.

Ubiquitous caught J. H. Loughheim's First Son by a neck in the time of 1:38 3-5 as Mrs. Louise Palladino's Layaway finished third, a length and a half away. The favorite, Robert W. Collins' Irresistible, was a poor fourth.

The winner paid $28.20, $12 and $7.40. First Son returned $6.20 and $3.80 and Layaway $5.20 for show.

Valdina Farm's Valdina Melia and Mrs. Charles C. Winters' Paircals brought up the field in that order. First Son disposed of Paircals in the first half mile and held courageously in the stretch only to bow to Ubiquitous' late rush.

Gjolme Fires A 66, Enters Semifinals

Favorites Swept To Sidelines in National Event; Ray Brownell Bows

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., June 25.—Sandy haired Harold Gjolme, a University of Washington junior, with a broad smile, today burned up the Chain o' Lakes course with a 66 to hurdle into the semifinals of the National Intercollegiate Golf Tournament.

Gjolme became a dark horse among dark horses in 36 holes of eliminations which shaved the field from 16 to 4 and swept favorites to the sidelines.

The little 21-year-old Norwegian, winner of the National Intercollegiate Skiing Championship two years ago will face Frank Tatum, jr., of Stanford tomorrow in 36 holes of semifinal match play.

Keeping the international touch, Madrid-born Manuel de la Torre of Northwestern will square off against Bob Kuntz of Yale.

Gjolme ousted Ray Brownell of Stanford, 1941 intercollegiate runnerup, one-up in the morning round and then powdered Northwestern's John Stoltz 4 and 3.

Shoots # 66

Gjolme, after winning the match, played out the bye holes against Stoltz for his 66, which was five strokes under par and one stroke under the course record, but was not accepted as an official new low because the meet is match play.

He posted six birdies by sinking putts ranging up to 15 feet and in one instance holed a 15-yard approach.

Stylist de La Torre beat Bill Kuntz of Yale, Bob's brother, 2 and 1 and then eliminated Allan Whaling, University of Cincinnati, 6 and 5 in the day's most decisive victory. Four up at the turn, the dapper Spaniard was one under par when he ended the match on the thirteenth, becoming the first Northwestern golfer ever to get to the semi-finals.

Tatum won his way to the semifinals by beating Keith Welts of Washington 3 and 2 and Dale Morey of Louisiana State 2 and 1. In the last match, Morey held him even on the outgoing nine but faded to three over par as Tatum stayed even with a peppery putter.

Bob Kuntz, after putting out Ohio State's John Krisko 5 and 3, downed John Holmstrom of Illinois 3 and 2. Holmstrum, 1938 Illinois amateur champ, admitted he had done his best earlier by dispatching defending Champion Earl Stewart of Louisiana State 5 and 4.

Other players eliminated today were John Donohue of Georgetown University, Jim Teale of Minnesota and Midshipman David Paul of the United States Naval Academy.

Hoya Golfer Shares Nonqualifiers' Medal

South Bend, Ind., June 25 (AP).—Jim McCarthy of Illinois, the Big Ten golf champion; Jack Harrigan of Notre Dame and R. W. Higgins of Georgetown University tied today for the nonqualifiers' medal play championship at the Notre Dame University course.

Each posted a 73, two over par 71 links. Competition was open to players who failed to qualify for the national intercollegiate tournament.

Mickey's Ready to Face Major League Stars

Mickey Harris, Bosox hurler who has been on the pitching end of Coast Artillery guns in the Canal Zone lately, is measured by his proud parents for the uniform in which he will pitch for service men in the All-Star game in Cleveland, July 7 Mickey is home in New York on a 30-day furlough

Hudson's 5-Hit Effort Wasted, Nats Lose, 2-0

Chicago, June 25.—The Nats were dealing strictly in round figures again today and got themselves licked, 2-0, by the White Sox. It was another display of offensive baseball by the Washington sluggers—offensive to the pained gaze of Manager Bucky Harris.

For the second consecutive day, the Nats couldn't stir up a run against Chicago pitching and this afternoon they couldn't even get to third base against Frank Ross. They still haven't scored a run since Sunday.

Sid Hudson held the White Sox to five hits while the Nats were collecting six hits off Ross, but Hudson was working in a hopeless cause. The Nats didn't come within 180 feet of making a run, the distance from second base to the plate.

Hudson held the White Sox to one hit after the fourth inning in an attempt to keep the Nats in the ball game, but it was useless. Chicago's two-run lead was insurmountable.

Vernon, Early Try

Mickey Vernon and Jake Early tried to get the Nats a run, each of them banging out a double and a single, but the only other guys in the Washington batting order to get a hit were Johnny Sullivan and Hudson himself. Roy Cullenbine went hitless for the third day in a row and Stan Spence stretched his hitless streak to two games.

The White Sox reached Hudson for the game-winning run in the third inning, very suddenly, after two were out. Ross personally banged a two-bagger into right field and Wally Moses scored him with a single to center.

Mickey Vernon led off the fourth inning with a single to center, but the Nats couldn't move him past first base. Sullivan doubled to right in the fifth and got no farther. Early singled to right in the ninth, and Repass rapped into a double play. Hudson singled to center with one out in the eighth, but never saw second. Vernon opened the ninth

2 Teen-Age Girls Win In Western Golf Open

Jeanne Cline, Phyllis Otto Advance by Beating Misses Sessions, Kirby, Respectively

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 25.—A couple of teen-age girl golfers—17-year-old Phyllis Otto of Atlantic, Iowa, and 18-year-old Jeanne Cline of Bloomington, Ill., worked their way through the quarter-finals of the Women's Western Open Tournament today and qualified to meet Marjory Row, 20, of Detroit, Mich., and Betty Jameson, 24, of San Antonio, Tex., in tomorrow's semifinals.

The two golferettes advanced in a day of hard-played matches, the easiest being Miss Otto's 3 and 2 triumph over Sallie Sessions of Muskegon, Mich. Miss Cline defeated Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga., 2 and 1, climaxing the contest by sinking a 10-foot putt on the seventeenth green for a birdie 4.

Miss Row's victory was at the expense of Virginia Ingram, Winnetka, Ill., whom she defeated 2 and 1. Miss Jameson was forced to rally and capture the final three holes before stopping Dorothy Foster of Springfield, Ill., 2 up.

Miss Otto will play Miss Row and Miss Cline will meet Miss Jameson tomorrow afternoon over the Elmhurst Country Club layout.

Miss Cline's win over Miss Kirby, former Southern champion, was the day's surprise, the Bloomington girl taking advantage of the Atlantan's poor putting to be 1 up at the turn and then grabbing the fifteenth and seventeenth holes after Miss Kirby evened the match on the thirteenth.

Miss Foster played heads-up golf to hold Miss Jameson, former two-time national champion, even at the turn, and took a 1-up margin by winning the fourteenth. They halved the fifteenth and then Miss Jameson took the next three holes for the victory.

Miss Row, Michigan State College coed who defeated medalist Eleanor Dudley of Chicago in their first-round match Tuesday, was one down after nine holes with Miss Ingram. She evened the count by taking the eleventh and sank a 12-foot putt on the twelfth to go ahead. Miss Ingram caught up on the thirteenth but Miss Row took the fourteenth and seventeenth to triumph.

Tulane Star Is Victim in College Tennis

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, June 25.—One seeded player, Earl Bartlett of Tulane, No. 7, fell by the wayside today as the National Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament moved toward the semifinals.

Bartlett lost to Emery Neale of Stanword, 6—2, 6—4, and the lower bracket was almost cleared of seeded stars. Neale will face the winner of a match between Elston Wyatt of Annapolis and Larry Dee of Standford, seeded No. 6, in the semifinals tomorrow. The Dee-Watt affair was halted today after each player had won a set.

In the upper bracket, favored Ted Schroeder of Stanford came through with a 6—2, 6—3 victory over Jack Rodgers of Rice, and Bill Reedy of Southern California beat Harris Everett of North Carolina, 6—0, 6—4. Schroeder, seeded second and Reedy, No. 4, make up the other singles semifinalists.

Suspension Lifted

New York, June 25 (AP).—The Jockey Club stewards, who yesterday announced the suspension of Jockey Ira Hanford had been continued until July 26, today corrected that ruling and said he would be permitted to ride starting Saturday.

Cards Blank Braves, 4-0, In Benefit

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 25.—An Army-Navy relief game crowd of 25,093 saw the fireballing Mort Cooper win his tenth victory of the season and collect his sixth shutout today when the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Boston Braves, 4-0, on his two-hit performance.

While running his string of consecutive scoreless innings to 32, Cooper, whose three losses have been by one-run margins, retired the first 16 Boston batters to face him. Chet Ross singled with one out in the sixth inning and Ernie Lombardi connected safely with two out in the seventh. The only other Brave to reach first base was Maxie West, who drew the only Cooper pass.

Al Javery opened against Cooper and, after the Cardinals gained an unearned run in the first inning, the Boston right-hander lost his control in the third. When the visitors collected three more tallies on that many hits and a trio of passes.

Before the game, the Army, Navy and Marine Corps staged an elaborate program, which included the induction of 200 into military service and a parade. That included the rival teams and all of their service guests.

President Bob Quinn reported that the receipts, which are far from complete because of the widespread sale of tickets, now total $28,537. David Provizer of Brookline provided $200 of that sum with his successful bid during the auction for home plate.

9 Yankees To Play in July 6 Game

Nats' Buck Newsom Overlooked Despite Manager's Vote; Red Sox Place Four

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, June 25.—Pitcher Sir Hudson and Outfielder Stan Spence of the last place Nats have been honored with selection to the American League All-Star team which will play the National League All-Stars at the Polo Grounds on July 6.

Announcement of the American League All-Star squad of 25 players revealed it is strongly flavored with New York Yankees, who were voted no fewer than nine berths by the eight managers who picked the team.

Neither Hudson nor Spence was selected for the team by Washington Manager Bucky Harris, who submitted the name of Buck Newsom as his choice to represent the Nats, but he was outvoted by other managers. Harris has been appointed a coach of the American League team.

Record Overlooked

Hudson was selected despite his dismal appearance in the 1941 All-Star game at Detroit, where he pitched a home run ball to Arky Vaughan, which put the National League in the lead. He has been chosen, moreover, despite his 1942 record, which shows only four victories and seven defeats, and only one win in his last six starts.

Spence is being honored for his consistent .300 hitting in the Nats' outfield. His batting average has declined considerably in recent weeks, but he remains as one of the comparatively few American League outfielders who are hitting more than .300.

Three Yankee pitchers—Ruffing, Bonham and Chandler—were voted on the team, as were two Yankee catchers—Bill Dickey and Buddy Rosar. A notable Yankee absentee is Charley Keller, a light hitter this season. Joe Di Maggio and Tommy Henrich were chosen from the Yankee outfield, and Joe Gordon and Phil Rizzuto from the Yankee infield.

The Yankees, with nine players on the team, far outstrip any other club in numbers. The Red Sox won four places, the Tigers and Indians three, the Nats two and the White Sox, Browns and Athletics one each.

A highlight of the voting was the selection of Ed Smith, Chicago pitcher, on the club, despite his ten defeats and one victory to this point. The managers took into consideration the large number of splendid games Smith has pitched in defeat this season, including two 1-to-0 games and a two-hitter.

Nine pitchers were named to the

Arlington Stake Called Off for Lack of Stars

By International News Service

Chicago, June 25.—Arlington Park's $30,000 Invitational Stake, which would have brought such horses as Alsab, Whirlaway, Shut Out and Market Wise together as the feature of the track's July 4 Army-Navy Day program, has been canceled, it was announced tonight.

Inability to bring the star-studded field together was given as the reason for the cancelation.

Track officials said they had been informed Shut Out, the Kentucky Derby winner, will remain in the East to fill commitments, that Market Wise has been temporarily retired, and that Alsab, at Arlington recovering from a leg injury, is being pointed solely for the $85,000 Arlington Classic, July 25.

Four Runs in 3d Win for Dodgers Over Starr and Reds, 4-0

Medwick Extends Batting Streak; Thompson Relieves In Twilight Game

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 25.—The Brooklyn Dodgers banged four runs across after two were out in the third inning tonight to rout Ray Starr and shut out the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 0, on the five-hit hurling of the veteran Johnny Allen.

The big blast by the Dodgers included a single by Joe Medwick, extending his hitting streak to 27 consecutive games.

Peewee Reese and Lew Riggs singled to start the blowup. Pete Reiser also singled to score Reese with the first run and Medwick knocked Riggs home. Finally Dolph Camilli doubled to score two more runs and bring Gene Thompson to Starr's relief.

Thompson allowed only one hit in 5 1/3 innings and gave no walks, but his effort was futile. It was the third defeat against ten victories for the 36-year-old Starr, who gave Brooklyn 7 hits in his short stay on the mound.

Allen kept Cincinnati's blow well spaced and had no trouble attaining his fifth victory. He has lost four.

Anticlimax Easy Victor At Delaware

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., June 25.—Hal Price Headley's Anticlimax romped to an easy victory here today in the fifth running of the mile and a furlong Diamond States Stakes.

With a crowd of 8000 fans, including Walter W. Bacon, Governor of the State of Delaware, looking on, the chestnut gelded son of Supremus and Antisana, took command from the pacemaking Buckskin at the head of the stretch and then opened up as he went along to reach the judges with three lengths to spare. Despite a great finish by Eddie Arcaro, Buckskin could not keep pace when the ultimate winner looked him in the eye and the Greentree Stable colorbearer had to be content with the second share of the $7,500 added purse. Trelawny, from the stable of Mrs. E. H. Augustus and a slight favorite in the six-horse field, was third, two and a half lengths before Christiana Stable's Half Crown. Trierarch and Crosstide completed the field.

Anticlimax was ridden by Al Schmidl, who came down from New York expressly to ride the Headley gelding. Schmidl allowed Anticlimax to settle into his stride behind Buckskin's early pace and then closed in on the pacemaker with apparent ease when ready. Trelawny raced in third position throughout and had no excuse. Trierarch, which had run several bang-up races behind tonight opposition recently in New York, flashed a turn of early speed, but flattened out when the real test began in the stretch.

Anticlimax completed the mile and a furlong route over a fast track in 1:51 2/5 and paid $7.70 straight.

10-Round Intra-Service Scrap Tonight Tops 34-Round Card for Navy Relief

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., June 25.—The Nation's first big intraservice sports event of the war comes off at Foreman Field here tomorrow night bringing together former middleweight champions, Fred Apostoli of the Naval Training Station, and Ken Overlin of the Naval Air Station.

The former bosses of the 160-pound division will trade blows in the 10-round feature of a 34-round boxing card being staged for the benefit of the Navy Relief Society and a throng of 10,000 is expected to turn out for the fistic carnival.

All was in readiness for the big event here tonight with interest gaining momentum hourly. Apostoli, the former San Francisco bellhop who won the title in 1938 from Young Corbett, wound up his work with a short session in the gym while Overlin called it quits yesterday and rested today.

The oft-repeated scene of a puncher (Apostoli) tangling with a boxer (Overlin) has left fans stymied in regards to selecting a favorite and it's a matter of 6-5 and take your choice here.

Not prone to making pre-fight predictions, Apostoli, however, tonight declared he was confident he would "pub Overlin away before the tenth.

Overlin, full of confidence himself, said "I'm a cinch to win. I beat him once before (Ken won a split decision in 1937) and I'll do it again."

Fred will come in at 160 while Overlin is expected to be three pounds heavier.

Working in Fred's corner will be Billy Soose, the Pennsylvania lad who trimmed Overlin for the crown and who is now a shipmate of Fred's at the training station, and Ray Arcel, boxing's leading trainer.

A host of naval and civilian bigwigs will be in attendance.

Al Smith Wins Fourth Straight For Tribe, 4-1

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 25.—Al Smith, holding the opposition to five hits, won his fourth straight game today as the Indians polished off the Athletics, 4 to 1, and finished the three-game series with three victories.

Roger Wolff allowed the Tribe seven safeties, one of them Oris Hockett's eighth inning homer, but the issue had been decided before the Indian right fielder lifted a three-and-two pitch over the right field wall.

The Tribe scored twice in the fourth after singles by Hockett and Ken Keltner and an intentional pass to Les Fleming had filled the bases. Hockett scored after Manager Lou Boudreau's long fly and Keltner came home when Catcher Harold Wagner let the ball get past him.

The Athletics scored their run in the next inning when Dick Siebert's single brought in Bob Johnson, who had doubled. The A's went on to fill the bases, but Wolff hit into a double play to end the threat. Ray Mack tripled and tallied for Cleveland in the same inning after Otto Denning sent a long fly to Dee Miles.

Smith's record now stands at six won and five lost.

Millers' Protest Of Loss Not Allowed

Columbus, Ohio, June 25 (AP).—President George M. Trautman of the American Association today disallowed Minneapolis' protest of Indianapolis' 4-to-3 Monday night victory over the Millers.

Minneapolis Manager Tom Sheehan protested that Player Skelley of the Indians missed the plate in scoring the tying run, was helped to his feet by a teammate and pushed back to the plate.

Trautman said his investigation showed, however, Skelley reached over and touched the plate with his hand after sliding past and before being helped to his feet by the teammate and thus there was no interference involved.

6 Runs in Eighth Inning Ousts Rookie; Bloodworth's Homer Tops Big Frame

By the Associated Press

Detroit June 25.—The Detroit Tigers exploded for six runs in the eighth inning today to defeat the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 3, for the first time in six starts and thereby ending Rookie Cecil (Tex) Hughson's personal winning streak at four games. The rally was topped by Jimmy Bloodworth's ninth homer of the season with one aboard.

For seven innings Hughson scattered four hits, including Ned Harris' fourth-inning homer, his sixth of the year, for the lone Detroit run. Lou Finney's double and Ted Williams' single produced a run in the first and Johnny Pesky sent home another in the seventh with one of his four hits, so Boston was leading, 2-1, when Detroit came to bat in the eighth.

Billy Hitchcock opened with a single and Barney McCosky tripled him home. Rudy York's double put Detroit in front and Harris was passed purposely before Mace Brown replaced Hughson. Pinky Higgins greeted Brown with a two-run double and Bloodworth followed with his homer.

Rookie Hal White gave up another Boston run in the ninth on singles by Pesky and Finney, followed by Williams' outfield fly, but he achieved his sixth victory against five defeats. It was Hughson's third defeat against six victories.

Before the Tigers shelled Hughson from the mound they had been limited to one run in 17 innings against Red Sox pitching. Detroit hadn't defeated Boston since May 19, and the Red Sockers still have eight victories in 12 games this year.

Electric Nine Cuts Current Of Lunchmen

After leading most of the way, New York Avenue Lunch nine went down to a 4-3 defeat in the Departmental League yesterday when Western Electric staged a two-run rally in the eighth inning. A single by Outfielder Wilson, followed by Third Baseman Hall's error accounted for the winning runs.

Ault Ties Overton and Scales for Maryland Amateur Medal

D. C. Golfer Posts a 73, 3 Over Par

Five Washingtonians Gain Championship Flight; Burnett Defends Crown

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, June 25.—Eddie Ault saved the Washington delegation a share of the qualifying medal in the Maryland State Amateur championship here today at Five Farms with one of the oddest rounds in the history of the tournament yet one good enough to tie Spencer Overton, a former titlist from Rolling Road and Ken Scales, of the Clifton Parks Public Links Club. All had three over par 73's.

Ault, a quarter-finalist in the tournament last year, from Indian Spring, stood on the fourteenth tee with only one par for the round yet he was only two over perfect figures. For the first eight holes he didn't own a par although he had a three for a 35 with four birdies and four bogeys.

The former minor league ball player, a Pepco employe, parred the ninth for his 35 and then started off on the back nine with his good-bad golf. He birdied the tenth and went over on the next three holes before he finally holed a putt for a five on the fourteenth for his second par of the day. He went over again in the fifteenth and then finished with three pars for his medal-tying 73.

Five in Title Flight

Five Washington golfers made the championship flight including Volney Burnett, the defending champion from Indian Spring who pushed a five-iron shot into the woods on the short seventeenth and took 5 where a par 3 would have earned the medal. He had a 74, a score matched by his victim in last year's finals, Bob Albertus. The latter, a former Washingtonian now from this city, was out in par 35 and back in 39 for his 74.

The only 75 shooters of the day were from the District. Gene Pittman, Congressional, and Dick Melvin, Kenwood, played the championship golf course the same way, out in 37 and back in 38 to qualify comfortably.

Columbia's Ray Swearingen, runner-up in the Middle Atlantic two weeks ago, put on a blazing 2-3 finish, birdies on the last two holes to earn his berth in the first 16 the hard way. Swearingen's 77 was the highest qualifying score and when he stood on the seventeenth tee with par for a 79 he appeared to be on the outside. But that was before he rolled in a 12-footer for a deuce on the seventeenth and a 25-footer for a three on the finishing hole, knowing he had to do it or play off with Ernie Caldwell, a former champion.

The District's three top ranking junior golfers shot themselves out of the first flight. Joe Barse, the junior champ of two days, was too high with a 79; Earle Skinker, Columbia, had 80, and Arthur Myers, the schoolboy champ, started with the ducking hooks and took 84. Among other D. C. entries, Charlie Malone missed with an 80, and Maury Fitzgerald with 81. M. Parker Nolan and Craig McKee did not start.

Two Baltimoreans Next

After the 76s two host city players had 76, Charles Bassler, Rolling Road, and Ed Finnessy, Mount Pleasant. Public links players dominated the 77 group which included Swearingen and two prominent host club players, Don McPhail and Edgar Lucas.

Ault was second low scorer in this tournament last year, but after his 5-5 start on the opening par four holes his medal chances looked none too good. But then he fired three consecutive birdies on as many tough holes, playing great approach shots to the perfect greens. Ault went over on the next two and then birdied the eighth to get back even with par and faced the ninth with his freak score.

Mrs. Stokes Again Defeats Mrs. Meckley

District Champion Turns Back Rival in Maryland Golf Event

By a Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, June 25.—For the second straight Thursday the fortunes of the draw pitted Washington's two outstanding women golfers, Mrs. Walter R. Stokes and Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, against each other in major tournament competition and for today's result in the Maryland State Champsionship you can look to last Thursday's score in the District. It was Mrs. Stokes again the winner by the same 5-and-4 count.

The two-time Washington City champion from Manor Country Club, who defeated Mrs. Meckley, 5 and 4, in the semifinals of the District last Thursday at Chevy Chase and had par in for a 76 when the match ended, had par for a 75 today at the Country Club of Maryland in the quarter-finals of the State championships.

For the 14 holes of the feature match Mrs. Stokes required only 21 putts. On seven of the tricky greens at the Old Rogers Forge course the D. C. titlist one-putted and it would have been eight except for a stymie on the back nine. She holed three putts of more than 20 feet and didn't miss anything under 5 feet.

Mrs. Stokes, who won the State title in 1940, was deprived of a semifinal meeting with her constant golfing partner and clubmate, Mrs. L. G. Pray, when the latter lost the last three holes and the match to Elizabeth Bonthron, the former All-American lacrosse player from Hillendale C. C.

Holes 55-foot Putt

Mrs. Pray was two up and three to play, the biggest margin in an even match to that point. Here Miss Bonthron stepped up to a 55-foot putt, with defeat staring her in the face, and knocked it in the cup to pare the margin to one up and two to play and the Baltimorean won the seventeenth to square the match when Mrs. Pray's tee shot caught the ditch. All even playing the eighteenth, Mrs. Pray went over the green on the finishing par four in three shots, chipped back four feet from the cup and missed the putt for a six to allow Miss Bonthron to win the hole with a five.

In an all-Baltimore semifinal in the upper bracket tomorrow, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, a former Baltimore City champion, will meet Mrs. Maurice Glick, the tournament medalist from Woodholme. Mrs. Schluderberg had things her own way as she ousted Mrs. M. Louise Bell of Hollendale, 4 and 2, while Mrs. Glick routed Katherine Hartzell of the host club, 7 and 6. The latter was far off the pace which accounted for an upset triumph over Mrs. Jerome Sloman, a former champion, in the first round.

Mrs. Meckley won only two holes all day from Mrs. Stokes in taking a second decisive beating from the same player in as many weeks, the first time that this has happened in her 12 years of tournament play in this section. The Kenwood Club shotmaker won the fourth when Mrs. Stokes hit a poor tee shot and took seven and the seventh, where a dead stymie led to Mrs. Stokes taking a six. The rest of the match was the winner's all the way.

Two of Mrs. Stokes' one-putt greens came in the first three holes and helped her to a 2 up advantage. The District rivals seesawed the remainder of the first nine, the winner turning with a 2-up advantage.

Mrs. Stokes knocked a 25-foot putt home on the eleventh hole for a win after being trapped in 2. She won the next when Mrs. Meckley was over the green and on the thirteenth the Manorite dropped a 30-foot putt for a birdie 2, her second deuce of the round. The other was the result of a 20-foot putt which found the cup on the eighth.

Mrs. Rex Howard of Kenwood won, 3 and 2, in the second flight consolation, while in the championship flight consolation Mrs. W. H. Wise, Kenwood, defaulted.

Cameo Scores Over Mellanos On 2 Hits, 3-0

Cameo Furniture gathered a grand total of two singles yesterday but managed to defeat Mellanos Grill, 3-0, in a Post Industrial League game on the East Ellipse.

Aaron Silverman, the losing pitcher, allowed the two hits in the first inning and thereafter pitched almost perfect ball. Otis Printz gave up six hits but kept them well scattered.

Cameo scored their first run in the first after two were out on an error and their lone two hits by Jimmy Schwab and Archie Via. The other two tallies in the fourth were sort of peculiar. Via and Clarke walked, advanced on a wild pitch and scored when Mellanos' catcher, Jim Hawes, attempted to pick Via off third and threw into left field.

Cameo's Johnson hit a triple in the second inning but was awarded an automatic out when everybody agreed he had failed to touch first base.

It was Cameo's second victory and Mellanos' second loss in the second half of the Post Industrial League. Today Heurich Brewers meet Little Tavern on the South Ellipse at 5:30 p. m.

Podgajny Protests to No Avail

Pitcher Johnny Podgajny of the Phils had plenty to say to Umpire Larry Goetz after Chicago had scored 5 runs off him in the third inning oi yesterday's game at Philadelphia. He had so much to say, as a matter of fact, that he was waved to the bench so the game could be resumed. The Cubs coasted to a 7-to-1 verdict

Bill Lee Allows Phils 5 Hits, Cubs Win, 7-1

By International News Service

Philadelphia, June 25.—Bill Lee limited the Philadelphia Phils to only five hits today to give the Chicago Cubs a 7-to-1 victory and a sweep of the three-game series. The win was Lee's ninth.

After allowing five runs in three innings, Johnny Podgajny, Phils' pitcher, blew up and was banished from the game following an exchange of words with Umpire Jock Conlan.

The big third saw Hack open with a walk. Merullo, Cub shortstop, was hit by a pitched ball, and Cavarretta walked to fill the bases. Russell's single scored Hack and Merullo. Nicholson flied out. Foxx and Novikoff drew bases on balls, sending Cavarretta home. Hernandez' single scored Russell and Foxx. That was enough for Podgajny.

15,000 Fans Expected for Grays' Game

More than 15,000 baseball enthusiasts are expected to be present Sunday afternoon when the Washington Homestead Grays play host to the powerful Newark Eagles in a Negro National League doubleheader at Griffith Stadium at 2 o'clock.

The red hot Homesteaders, eager avenge a twin fall before these same Eagles here last April 19, will be prepared to lead with their outstanding pitchers in Roy Partlow, youthful left hander, and Ray Brown, veteran right hander.

Partlow crashed the ranks of outstanding pitchers here a week ago last Thursday night when he kept 26,113 cash customers in an uproar as he subdued the Kansas City Monarchs, Negro American League champion, in a 10-inning duel, 2 to 1. Not only did the little southpaw outlast the great Satchelfoot Paige and his successor, Milton Smith, on the firing line, but he also tripled over the winning run in the ninth.

The Grays turned in one of their best games of the season last Sunday afternoon at Yankee Stadium, New York, when they beat out the Philadelphia Stars, 3 to 2, in a game that was broken up by hard hitting Josh Gibson's 410-foot home run.

In their last two starts locally the Grays not only have stampeded Dizzy Dean's All Stars, 8-1, and shaded the Monarchs, but they have attracted well over 46,000 paid admissions in so doing.

Hank Greenberg 'Too Busy' for Cleveland Game

By the Associated Press

Miami Beach, Fla., June 25.—Army officials said today Hank Greenberg would be too busy at his duties in the Air Corps Officer Candidate School to play July 7 at Cleveland in the baseball game between service stars in a big league all-star team.

Greenberg received an invitation and the Air Corps Command a request that he play in the game, but the Detroit batsman did not ask for leave.

He is engaged in an intensive 12-week course.

'Jeem' Takes Another Mat Bout, This One Over O'Toole

By Oscar Elder

Jim Londos, the immortal "Jeem" whose wrestling career has had a longer run than "Abie's Irish Rise" and "Tobacco Road" combined, kept his near-spotless record intact last night when he downed tremendous Tommy O'Toole of the United States Coast Guard after 33 minutes of the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena.

Londos, who was a mild sort of villain throughout the script despite his amiable dressing-room personality, was on the offensive throughout the struggle and displayed a firm armlock which O'Toole found difficult to fathom. The sailor used an identical grip to his own advantage, but Londos continually found ways of solving this problem for he frequently broke the hold to apply his own version with a bit more finesse.

After 22 minutes of combat, O'Toole clamped a rugged body scissors on the Greek that had some 1500 fans screaming with approval. However, James showed 'em his body twist and rolled out of difficulty. Then, to break the monotony, he unlimbered a few impotent pokes at O'Toole, who was little worried by this futile flisticuffing.

O'Toole, who has lost to Londos in two previous meetings, found opportunity right smack dab in his lap at the half-hour mark when he got a chance to apply a cradle hold. However, the uncrowned rassle king eluded this maneuver and countered with a series of body slams which were a prelude to the finish. Then he floored O'Toole and gave out with a body press which finished the struggle in the thirty-third minute of the scheduled 90-minute affair.

Despite a lot of advance publicity to the contrary, King George of Greece was conspicuous by his absence at last night's soiree. In fact, a canvass of the house failed to reveal a single member of royalty in the eager throng.

Maurice La Chappelle and one John Mulan, a newcomer from Florida, won the semifinal, a two-man team affair, when they took the two final falls out of three from Hank Kulkovich and Jim Austeri, an extremely villainous combine. The only casualty in this scuffle was Casey Berger, Promoter Turner's most proficient and portliest referee, who suffered a head injury when he whacked Kulky resoundingly on the dome to signify the use of an illegal bit of strategy by that worthy.

Although La Chappelle was minus the services of his regular teammate, Ace Freeman, who is at present on a Canadian tour, he and Mulan came through with gang tactics to down Kulkovich in ten minutes and Austeri in six minutes, to take the last two falls and the match. Mulan was counted out on the initial fall when he was submerged beneath the combined bulks of Kulkowich and Austeri in the first six minutes of the fray.

One Michele Leone, erstwhile journeyman on the Jack Pfeffer muscle circuit, made his debut at Turner's by capturing a decision over grizzled Milo Steinborn in 18 minutes with a back drop and body press. This match was a roughie all the way and had the fans in a dither. Leone was trailing throughout most of the hostilities and seemed more surprised than anyone when he came up the victor.

In the opener, Abe Yourist and Hans Kampfer perspired to a satisfactory draw, with the bulky Hans billed as the evil one.

Marandan Nosed Out by High Plaid at Charles Town Track

Elks Purse Develops 2-Horse Race

$7.80 Shot Beats Favorite at Wire; Dr. Posey Wins But Dufford Is Hurt

By Walter Haight
Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 25.—J. H. Laidley's High Plaid nosed out Edward Brining's Marandan in a thrilling finish of the Elks Purse, featuring the Thursday program here. Although a two-horse affair from start to finish, the battle was a keen one and the two rivals went into the wire as a team. Five lengths back came John C. Ellis' Tensleep to be third. Only five started in the test of 6½ furlongs.

With Marandan an odds-on favorite, High Plaid backers collected at the rate of $7.80 for the usual deuce. High Plaid was capably handled by Jockey Frank Moon and was clocked in 1:21, creditable time for the sprint route.

Jockey Palumbo was aboard Marandan and appeared to ride too confidently. He allowed High Plaid to come to him in the early stages but the Brining mare was saving ground and under restraint. When the final test came, Palumbo pushed Marandan with all he was worth but High Plaid hung on with rare courage and in the concluding strides got up to win the camera award.

Trainer George A. Cook of Washington, saddled the winner of the first race in Doctor Posey, a son of Dr. Freeland and Rose. The colt came from behind under strong handling by Jockey Patsy Grant and headed H. R. Dulaney's Happy Am I out of first money. Doctor Posey paid $8.20. Jockey Willie Dufford slightly injured his foot and had to cancel his mounts for the remainder of the day. He rode Aggressive.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

A bunch of the boys were talking about starts. One remarked the worst one he ever saw was at New Orleans. The Racing Form chart caller made the following comment in the foot notes: Start bad for all but winner." It seems I was misinformed about the absence of Jockey Martin Bletzacker. It is now reported that he has gone home to visit his parents.

Jockey R. (Buddy) Root who suffered injuries when thrown in a spill here over 10 days ago, has fully recovered and plans to resume riding here on Monday. Trainer T. Flammia announced that he would turn out the plater Lorton for the balance of the season and has shipped the plater to the farm at Richmond, Va. One of the proudest lads on the grounds here Wednesday was Apprentice Vincent Bracciale following his initial riding victory astride P. H. Faulconer's Zac Pam in the running of the eighth race. The Brooklyn (N. Y.) youngster under contract to Dick Floyd impressed horsemen with his handling of the 3-year-old, and should go far in his chosen profession. Richard R. Dickman who served as stable agent for the Bomar Stable for many seasons and also raced several horses in his own interest was a visitor. Dickman has been called into service with the United States Army and will be missing from racing circles for the duration.

Johnny Leyland, former rider, who has turned to training, plans to launch the 19-year-old Sylvester Haynes of Buffalo, N. Y., on a riding career in the near future. The Bison City youngster has been exercising horses for the past three years and Leyland predicts a bright riding career for the lad who scales the beams at 90 pounds. Veterinarian W. E. Trussel reported that efforts will be made to save the 3-year-old filly Iva Mae, owned by J. L. Friedman for breeding purposes. The miss suffered leg injuries in her last race that ended her usefulness as a racer. The stable owned by M. B. Goss of Winchester, Va., continues as the leading money winning racing establishment here according to a check of the records. The Goss stable will be campaigned at Hagerstown after the close of the current meeting here. See you on the rail.—Bill.

First race—OWALLER gets only a steadying assignment in this abbreviated sprint and should take it all. BUTTERMAN is fit and ready for the best. NEVER HOME is good and gets in light.

Second race—CHANCE WATCH seems to have found a spot that suits his purposes in this affair. I'm going to string along. BALKANESE likes the track and will be a factor. HIGH AIM to take care of the others.

Third race—CLIFTONS DAWN could be the right one in this field. Should make the most of the inside post position. NYLEVE was a winner last out and is dangerous. SWEET MISS for the minor award.

Fourth race—FANCY FRILLS gets my call in the day's juvenile event. Packs the speed and seems ready to carry the top weight. FREE BOY is good and deserves attention. TIPPY has been tipped and may awake with a bang.

Fifth race—INCENTOR may take the top and stay there with this kind. The route suits. REAL BOY is always in the money circle and will be a factor. PAVILION to take care of the others.

Sixth race—BRAXTON won a somewhat similar race over this track and I'm going to string along. MAN AT ARMS will get a change of riders and will be dangerous. WAUGH SCOTT to fill out the money circle.

Seventh race—GINOBI is the class of this distance test. Needs only a ride. MYSTIC MAN and CHIEF TEDDY for the place and show positions.

Eighth race—PURPORT has been improving steadily and appears to have found the right spot. AGNES KNIGHT will be right there if taken off the reserve list. GROUCHERS BOY for the show.

Substitute race—CLOCKS, JULETTE and NAVIGATION is the way I like them in this reserve field.

Best bet—Ginobi.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Intermittent rains have continued to keep the Potomac River muddy, but apparently have not affected the mountain streams in Maryland. Just as prospects began to get bright, another heavy rain had to come along and muddy up the Potomac and Monocacy Rivers, and just at a time when many fishermen were getting all set for more of that wonderful shad fishing with a fly-rod. If the Potomac continues to keep muddy, there is little chance for any good rock-fishing, and from all indications it will remain that way for quite a spell.

JACK BELL

It is a toss-up whether it will even be clear for opening day of black bass season next Wednesday. July 1 is an important date on the calendar of many Maryland and District of Columbia sportsmen, for on that day the anglers may again try their skill in their favorite bass waters. The creel limit this year in Maryland is ten black bass a day—in possession. Minimum size of legal "keepers" is ten inches, but if the season is anything like it was last year, anglers should set their minimum size of keepers at twelve inches. There are plenty of bass in the upper reaches of the Potomac.

Although the war, with its gasoline and tire shortages, may prevent sportsmen from taking many fishing trips, there will be plenty of fishing nearby this summer. Swain locks is only a short drive. In the past many Washington anglers have driven up to the locks after office hours and managed to get in a couple of hours of bass fishing during the best part of the day.

Tuesday, June 30 will be the last day of trouting on Big Hunting Creek. Big Hunting Creek is under the control of the National Parks Service, which makes and sets all regulations for streams within the boundaries of the parks. All other trout streams in Maryland remain open for trout fishing until July 15.

To the majority of anglers Big Hunting Creek, has been a big disappointment, apparently there are plenty of trout in its waters, but very few are caught.

Chesapeake Bay fishing, however, continues normal, although the number of fishermen who have been taking advantage of the opportunities offered is being materially reduced by the gasoline rationing and the scarcity of good fishing guides and boats. What few anglers are taking advantage are putting up quite a loud squawk about the high prices being charged for boat charter this year. That, added to the difficulties of getting leave and gasoline to make the long trip, is very discouraging.

A round-up of the fishing situation shows croakers or hardheads now are all over the bay, with the possibility of the "Gooses" being the best sport. Kenwood Beach, is a good point from which to make the trip and there is a fine fleet of fishing boats available, under the general command of Captain Parks. The rates there are $15.00 for 6 hours fishing with an extra charge of $1.50 for each angler over 10. At Breezy Point the base rate is $16.00.

Weakfish are fairly plentiful, many being taken on fresh shrimp bait, which is generally used for catching croakers. Peeler crab bait however, is the best for catching weakfish or sea-trout as they are called locally.

Rockfish are beginning to take a trolled lure—small white feather—with more regularity, those chumming with live grass shrimp are faring out the better.

Sportsmen of New Jersey, New York and lower New England continue to lambast Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia for their attitude toward the striped bass, or rock-fish as they are called locally.

The reason these Northern States are so interested in the striper is because fully 90 per cent of the crop are spawned in the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River. That is why they are interested in what we down here do or don't do in the way of protecting the rock-fish.

Whatever stripers are not spawned in the Chesapeake or Potomac, they see the first light of day down in lower Virginia and North Carolina waters. Likewise it receives little protection in North Carolina as in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Experts of the Fish and Wildlife Service have warned these States and the District of Columbia, again and again that its laws protecting the rock-fish or striped bass are not adequate. One of these days an enraged Federal Government, recognizing the value of the stripers as a food and sport fish, will step in and start regulating all our migratory food and game fishes, just like they did for our migratory wild waterfowl.

Washingtonian Bows in Pro Tennis Match

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Four remaining vacancies were filled in the quarter-final round of the National Professional Tennis Tournament at Forest Hills today, and the completed picture was, with one exception, exactly what the seeding committee had anticipated at the outset.

The tournament, resumed today after a three-day layoff, attracted 1000 fans who saw three seeded players and one unseeded entry advance to the round of eight. The lone unseeded victor was Frank Reriche of New York, who defeated Frank Kenney of Washington, 6—3, 6—1, 6—4.

The other winners were Bruce Barnes, Bobby Harman and John Nogrady, rated fifth to seventh in the draw. They had been preceded into the quarter-finals last Sunday by Don Budge, Bobby Riggs, Frank Kovacs and Wayne Sabin, the first four ranking professionals.

Barnes, the Austin (Tex.) veteran, won by default over Dan Watson, of Chevy Chase, Md., while Harman, a tennis tutor at Long Beach, N. Y., disposed of Al Chapin, New York, 9—7, 6—1, 6—1. Nogrady of Wilmington, Del., defeated Charley Wood of New York, 6—1, 6—1, 6—2.

Quarter-final pairings tomorrow pit Nogrady against Budge, Barnes with Sabin, Harman with Riggs and Reriche against Kovacs.

One semifinal round berth was filled in the doubles division when Sabin and Berkeley Bell of New York defeated the Kozeluh brothers, Karel and Jan, of New York, 10—8, 4—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Army-Navy Pitch Together at Navy Preflight School

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., June 25.—Those who have been clamoring for closer cooperation between the Navy and Army should see how well it is working for Lieut. Glenn Killinger, baseball coach at the U. S. Navy Pre-Flight School, Chapel Hill, N. C.

An Army is in there pitching for the Navy, and the Navy is giving its full support in return.

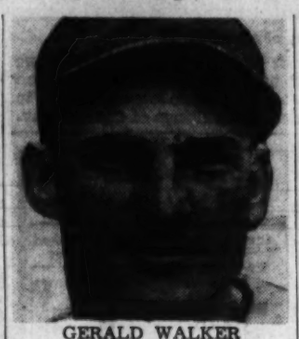
Cadet Vincent T. Army, of Worchester, Mass., and former member of the Holy Cross baseball team, is one of the leading prospects for pitcher of the Navy baseball team.

Army pitches, and the Navy gives it's full support—and this combination makes it tough on any opponent.

Gee Walker's Slump Remains Mystery—to Walker

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—One of the saddest figures in baseball these days is Gerald "Gee" Walker of the Cincinnati Reds, who was bought to add punch to the Reds' batting order and instead has been shackled by a slump such as few players ever have endured.



GERALD WALKER

When "Gee" was purchased from Cleveland last spring for a reported $25,000 the Reds figured they had added a .300 hitter to their outfield. With their great pitching, they would have been willing to settle for .290. Actually, they got a man whose average had fallen to .180 at last official count and whose confidence had been shaken so severely that Manager Bill McKechnie had removed him from the lineup.

"I can't figure out what's wrong," Walker said disconsolately today. "I've tried everything to break the slump. For a while I was meeting the ball and knocking it right at some fielder, but now I'm not even doing that. I'm not even hitting my weight, and that's pretty bad. Never thought it could happen to me."

It was suggested that he might be looking at better pitching in the National League than he did during the ten years he was compiling an overall average of .307 in the American. National leaguers have long entertained this theory.

"No, I can't honestly say I've noticed any real difference," said Gee, thoughtfully. "They're throwing me the same curves and fast balls and knucklers I got in the other league. They're not curving me to death and I can't see that the umpiring is any different. It's just that I can't hit anything.

"One big trouble is that when a man gets down like this the pitchers know he has lost his confidence and isn't going to hit anything. That makes them more confident and they work better. It's what you might call progressive.

"I never wanted to hit as bad in my life, because if I could give some help we would be right up there after Brooklyn. We've got the greatest pitching staff in the world. My legs are as good as ever and my eyesight's perfect. There's nothing wrong except that I can't get a hit.

"It's all in the swing. I know that, but I can't discover what I'm doing different. Every day I think maybe it will come back to me and I'll start slugging the ball. I would love to knock in a few runs for these pitchers of ours. Look at Elmer Riddle here. He's allowed three runs in the last 27 innings he's pitched and the poor guy won only one game in that stretch."

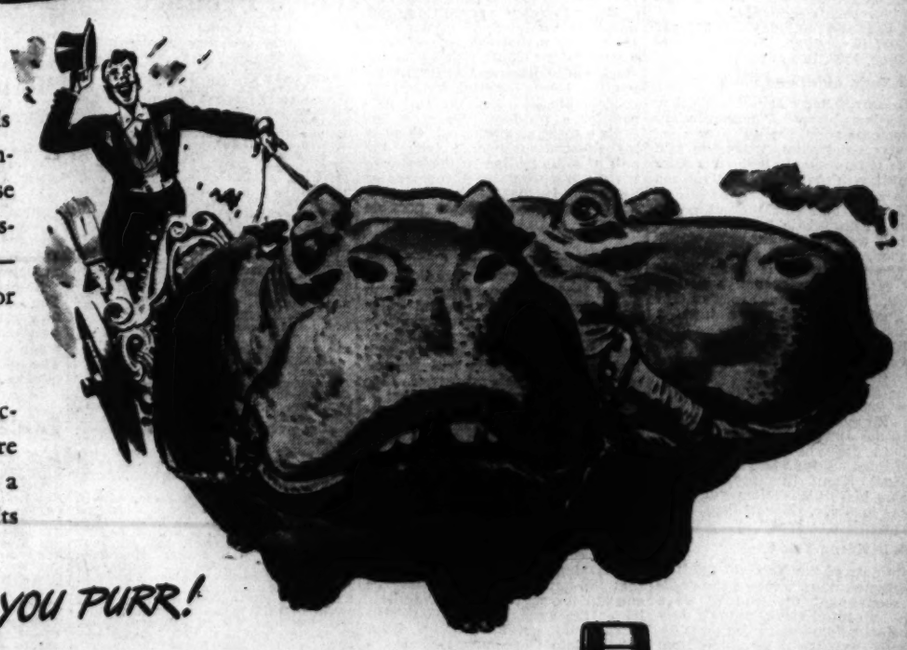
The old town's Seeing Something!

THE BIG SHOW'S ON!

Something new in whiskey goodness has come to town—an expensive, "imported-whiskey" flavor at the average man's price. A whiskey that comes from a new idea in whiskey making—a whiskey you'll be mighty glad to get acquainted with. Taste IMPERIAL—Hiram Walker's grand blend.

GREAT—FOR TWO BIG REASONS!



1. "Flavor-peaked" base whiskies! This superb American blend has that expensive, "imported-whiskey" flavor because its foundation whiskies are specially distilled to give them individual qualities—then blended together to a delicate "flavor peak."

2. "Velveted" spirits! Choice spirits actually made in the same stills as the rare base whiskies are then "velveted" by a method similar to the softening of spirits used in making fine Scotch.

AND ITS PRICE 'LL MAKE YOU PURR!

Taste IMPERIAL—and see how a perfectly grand flavor and a modest price have teamed up. Ask for a get-acquainted drink of IMPERIAL at your bar—or take home a bottle from your liquor store. Get a low-priced ticket to greater enjoyment—today!

Bankers Hear Kayser Appeal For War Truth

An early repair of the home front was urged last night by Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of university students and professor of European history, George Washington University, addressing the safe deposit section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, at Lee-Sheraton Hotel.

Speaker at the group's annual election and dinner meeting, Dr. Kayser warned that the home front is weakened by inability of regulating authorities to determine amount of the demand of necessary materials, extent of the supply, existing and to be expected, and the way to bring the two into agreement.

He advised the war at home can be won only by telling the whole and prompt truth.

In support of this, the speaker said while no one wants to give aid and comfort to the enemy by premature publication of information, it must be granted feeling is becoming prevalent that military reasons are advanced too often to explain delays and partial reports. The American public, he reminded, would be more satisfied if it was given simple factual reports with cumulative ones at frequent intervals.

Guy D. Cowl, chairman of the section, presided at the meeting which was attended by officers of the parent banking organizations.

Charles C. Boswell of the American Security & Trust Co., was slated to step up to the vice chairmanship of the safe deposit section. He has been vice chairman during the past year.

Life Underwriters Elect

Joseph M. Silverman, C. L. U., of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., was elected president. George A. Hatzes, of the Fidelity Mutual Insurance Co., was elected first vice president and Charles F. Suter was elected second vice president. Other members of the newly constituted board of directors are Raymond A. DuFour, Warren S. Stone, C. L. U., Paul W. Hammack, Paul F. Grove, jr., Charles W. O'Donnell, C. L. U., and T. Loehl O'Brien, C. L. U. Arthur C. Pearson of the Massachusetts Mutual has been reappointed secretary of the association.

Mr. Silverman attended George Washington University, where he majored in engineering, and later received a degree of bachelor of laws. He is a member of the bar of the District of Columbia, and in June, 1941, was made a member of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters. He has been associated with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. since 1932.

Wholesale Index Again Drops

Labor Department's wholesale price index for last week was 96.1, a drop for the third consecutive week. The reduction of 0.3 per cent brought the index to the lowest level since mid-April. In the last three weeks the index was dropped 0.7 per cent.

Seasonally lower prices for fruits and certain vegetables, together with declining quotations for livestock and meats accounted chiefly for last week's reduction.

A year ago the index was 87.2 and in 1937 it was 86.5. For the month of June, 1929, it was 95.2.

Bad News Aids Bond Sales

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau yesterday blamed "overoptimistic statements about the war" for a lag in war bond sales, which he said made it improbable that June sales would reach the quota of 800 million dollars.

"They (bond sales) don't go so good on optimistic news," he said.

"Last week, when the news wasn't so good, sales picked up.

"When the news is good, people just can't get mad enough to buy bonds, it seems. That has been true in England. Whenever a town is bomber, sales go up.

"It's true here, too. Alaska and Hawaii, for instance, lead in bond sales (on a proportionate basis.)"

The Secretary said that June income tax payments and other factors also were making it difficult to make the June bond quota. In the first 23 days of the month, war bond sales totaled $485,342,213.

Asked about the prospects of making his billion-dollar war bond quota in July, Morgenthau said, "that's still our goal."

Illusory Tax

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Case for and Against the Boland Bill; Vitality of Capital Market Declared Sapped

(Fourth in a series of six articles.)

The most important principle in taxation is that the revenue goose may be plucked but should never be killed. A levy upon income plucks the revenue goose; a levy upon capital serves to paralyze the goose so that there are slim pickings of the feathers.

So argue the advocates of the Boland Bill. They point out that Government tax revenue from capital gains was less than 13 million dollars in 1940. Therefore, it is an "illusory tax" or the "Treasury's pot of gold at the end of the rainbow." or as one cynic put it: The bundle of hay in front of the donkey's nose; always seen and never eaten.

The case against the Boland Bill was presented to the House Ways and Means Committee by Randolph E. Paul, special tax adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury, at two hearings. One of Mr. Paul's chief arguments was that the enactment of the Roland Bill, taxing all capital gains without distinction as to the holding period at a flat rate of 10 per cent, would result in a loss of revenue.

Foes of the capital gains tax reply with the assertion that records of the Treasury Department itself indicate the opposite, namely, that the rates proposed by the Treasury would produce far less revenue than the rate proposed in the Boland Bill. American experience, it was said, shows that productivity increases as rates decline.

Capital gains are income and should be taxed as such; short term gains (which are those received within the holding period of 18 months) as ordinary income, and long term gains on a more favorable basis. Capital losses should be allowed as deductions only from capital gains, and that since other income is to be taxed at rates up to 90 per cent, a 10 per cent rate on capital gains can not be justified.

Advocates of the Boland Bill reply to this argument substantially as follows:

Capital gains are not income in any true sense of the term, and hence there is no basis for comparison between capital gains and ordinary income. If, however, notwithstanding their true nature, capital gains are to be treated as income for tax purposes, every consideration of equity and justice requires that capital losses shall be treated as the direct opposite of income and that their deduction from income, of whatever character it may be, shall be permitted. In short, capital gains are either income or they are not income. If, for tax purposes, they are regarded as income, then capital losses which are the direct converse of capital gains, should be deductible from income.

Mr. Paul also contended that enactment of the Boland Bill would facilitate tax avoidance. He argued that the imposition of a tax rate on capital gains substantially below that levied on other sources of income would give taxpayers a strong incentive to convert other income into capital gains. He suggested as one method of accomplishing this the purchase of stock "exdividend, i. e., immediately after the payment of a dividend, and a sale "cum" dividend at a gain immediately prior to the payment of the next dividend."

The advocates of the Boland Bill reply that tax avoidance under its provisions would be inconsequential, and that to refrain from adopting its provisions merely because of this would be like burning down the house to get rid of the mice.

Elisha Friedman, consulting economist, in an involved explanation, showed an actual example of what a tax avoider would risk by buying stock exdividend and selling some months later cumdividend. Is it conceivable, he asked, that any person for a possible gain of a few cents a share on a $60 stock (used in his illustration) would incur the risk of a fluctuation in the price of the stock during the three months he holds it that might be many times the amount of the possible saving?

Following the House Committee hearings, it appeared that Congressional leaders were impressed with admissions that the capital gains tax is not a revenue producer, that it is serving social rather than fiscal ends, that its rate has been so high that normal business and normal returns have been prevented. One Congressman is quoted as saying:

"It looks to me as if this committee could afford to speculate with this tax. If that's all it has been yielding, we can pick some lower rate at which we figure that returns will make it worth while collecting."

Burton Crane, an authority on tax affairs, commented:

"Washington is realizing . . . that the capital gains tax has operated not only to remove the vitality of the capital market but also actually to prevent capital from flowing into Government bonds.

"Capital is frozen in large blocks. Men with profitable investments feel that they cannot afford to cash in on them. They have no assurance that they will be able to invest what remains of their funds after paying the tax at anything like the same rate of return. Accordingly they hold onto their large blocks of stock, their large farms, their real estate holdings, for the tax is permissive. It does not force a man to take his profits. It taxes him only if he does take them . . ."

N. J. Standard Faces Suits for $100,000,000

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Suits totaling 100 million dollars against the Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) to recover losses alleged to have resulted from the company's former agreement with I. G. Farbenindustrie, German chemical trust, disclosed today in a Supreme Court motion to consolidate 10 suits into one.

Thirty-six present and former officials and directors of Standard Oil and six corporations were named as defendants in the stockholder actions.

The suits alleged that the company violated antitrust laws by entering into a conspiracy with the German firm and others to "create a world monopoly of essentials in the chemical and oil fields, which include the production of synthetic rubber, synthetic oil and synthetic gasoline."

Losses sustained, it was charged, resulted from the failure of the company to exploit patents obtained at considerable cost, and from turning over certain patents to the German firm.

Contracts with the German cartel and Standard's alleged failure to supply adequate information to the Government regarding synthetic rubber had been the subject of charges made by Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General.

Last June 2 stockholders of the company gave their management an overwhelming vote of confidence at the company's annual meeting in Flemington, N. J., although a small but vociferous group of share owners sharply questioned the company's relations with the German trust.

An affidavit filed today by John W. Davis, attorney for 20 of the defendants, said that failure to consolidate the suits would result in an "impossible burden" on them.

Price Ceilings Seen Causing Meat Shortage

By the Associated Press

The Senate heard protests yesterday that price ceilings fixed by Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, threatened a wartime meat shortage.

Senator Butler (Republican) Nebraska, said that low price levels ordered on cattle and hogs encouraged farmers to cut off production and place corn under Government loans.

Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, said that 11 small Ohio meat packers were considering shutting down because of price ceilings. Ceilings, he added, should be high enough to encourage production by farmers and to give packers a fair-profit even though it might increase consumer meat costs.

Butler said he feared that the office of Price Administration was more interested in prices for consumers than an adequate food supply.

New Chocolate Curb

Meantime the Government cut down again yesterday on the amount of chocolate available to satisfy America's wartime sweet tooth.

Attempting to spread out dwindling supplies of cocoa beans and make current supplies last until mid-1943, thet War Production Board ordered the quota of beans which may be processed each quarter cut to 60 per cent of last year's figure. Previously, the quota was 70 per cent.

Cocoa beans, sole source of chocolate, are imported chiefly from West Africa and South America and supplies have been jeopardized by submarine warfare.

Clove Rule Eased

At the same time, however, WPB boosted the monthly allowance of cloves—imported from Zanzibar in increased quantities recently—to permit food processors, manufacturers of medicines, and clove packers to use the same average monthly amount they consumed last year. The increase was about one-third more than the previous quota.

Production of commercial-type truck trailers for nonmilitary use was ordered halted by the War Production Board, effective July 1. No manufacturer will be permitted to make any truck trailers having a load-carrying capacity of 10,000 pounds or more except for the Army and Navy, certain Government agencies, governments of the United Nations, or for deliveries under the Lend-Lease Act.

War Insurance Extension Asked

Hartford, Conn., June 25 (AP).—Lack of a sufficient number of forms for the writing of war damage insurance by private companies resulted today in a suggestion from this city, the insurance capital of the world, that the automatic coverage now provided by the Federal Government be continued for 30 days until August 1.

State Insurance Commissioner John C. Blackall wired Frank H. Christensen, executive vice president of the War Damage Insurance Corporation at Washington, that his office was besieged with complaints from agents who said they were swamped with requests for war damage insurance and did not have the facilities to write it. Commissioner Blackall suggested that a 30-day extension of the date upon which property owners are expected to provide for their own protection would "ease the situation."

Murphy Co. Preferred Stock Called at $105

McKeesport, Pa., June 25 (AP).—The outstanding 5 per cent preferred stock of the G. C. Murphy Co., which will be replaced with a new issue of 4¾ per cent preferred stock, is callable at $105 a share, with accrued dividends to October 1, 1942, instead of $107.50 as previously reported.

Stockholders yesterday approved the issuance of $9,000,000 worth of new preferred to replace $4,000,000 outstanding in old stock and for other undisclosed general purposes. The old stock recently has been quoted around $106 a share.

Dividends Cut By Two More A. T. & T. Units

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Two important subsidiaries of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s Bell System today announced reductions in dividends.

At Philadelphia directors of the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania voted a quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the common stock, a cut of 25 cents from the rate paid in previous quarters. The dividend is payable June 30 to holders of record June 30. All the common stock is owned by American Telephone.

The Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., with headquarters at Omaha, disclosed that directors reduced the dividend on the common stock of 75 cents a share from the $1.25 paid quarterly since 1937. All of this company's common stock is likewise owned by the parent company.

In the last six months or so three other Bell subsidiaries reduced their disbursements on common stocks, held in their entirety or nearly so by American Telephone. They were New England Telephone, New York Telephone and Western Electric Co., a manufacturing affiliate.

In nearly every case the dividend slashes were attributed by the company managements to tax inroads in earnings.

American Telephone Co. itself last May declared the usual quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share on its capital stock, continuing the rate in effect for the last 20 years. But at the annual meeting of the company held earlier, officials said adoption of proposed increased taxes would cut the company's earnings to a level well under the present dividend requirements.

Truckers Await ODT Revisions On Return Loads

Contract and private truck operators in Washington and throughout the Nation are waiting anxiously for word from the Office of Defense Transportation as to the extent to which its return load orders, effective July 1, will be amended before the drastic orders actually go into effect.

Washington offices of the National League of Wholesale Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Distributors yesterday reported that ODT officials have not yet given any indication of the changes to be made in the orders.

League spokesmen here said yesterday:

"We have requested ODT officials to further extend the effective date of the orders beyond July 1 . . . so as to allow shippers and dealers to satisfactorily effect necessary changes in their operations."

ODT officials, it was reported, have started work on amendments to the orders. The original orders, effective July 1, provide that truckers cannot operate unless they carry 100 to 120 per cent capacity loads in one direction and 75 per cent loads in the reverse haul.

Week's Bank Clearings Show 13.7% Upsurge

New York, June 25 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today the volume of bank transactions during the past week was at a rate 13.7 per cent above a year ago, although slightly under totals reported for the week ended June 17.

The mercantile agency said clearings at 23 leading cities totaled $6,930,829,000 compared with $6,097,166,000 a year ago.

New York volume at $3,549,756,000 was up 10.4 per cent from comparable 1941 figures, while Chicago's was barely ahead at $394,900,000 compared with $393,000,000.

Mild Irregularity Continues in Stock List; Pivotal Issues Close With Minor Changes

New York, June 25.—The stock market had little to go on today in the way of hopeful war news or tax optimism and the result was a continuance of mild irregularity.

There was some late bidding here and there but not enough to break the stalemate. Losses and declines were in small fractions at the start and most leaders finished with minor variations. There were a few wider gaps either way.

Expressions of encouragement by Congressional leaders after a conference with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt lifted Wall Street spirits a trifle but inconclusive battle developments in Egypt and at Sevastopol made for speculative and investment conservatism.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 35. Transfers of 245,420 shares compared with 243,680 Wednesday.

Among scattered strong spots was U. S. Distributing preferred which jumped 3½ points to a new top since 1931. Boeing was up 1⅝ in the wake of a $1 dividend declaration, first since the initial disbursement of 40 cents in December, 1937.

Chicago Great Western preferred was up 1⅛ and lesser advances were retained by Great Northern, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, Kennecott, Consolidated Edison, Johns-Manville and Zenith Radio.

Allied Chemical dropped 3 points. Smaller recessions were shown for Pennsylvania, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, Texas Co. and Eastman Kodak.

Bonds steadied at the last. Commodities were uneven. At Chicago wheat and corn were unchanged to off ½ and up ⅛ of a cent a bushel, respectively. Hogs were steady. Cotton lost 15 to 35 cents a bale.

In the Curb modest improvement was registered for Gulf Oil, Lake Shore and American Cyanamid. Decliners included American Gas, St. Regis Paper and American Light. Turnover here aggregated 44,460 shares versus 41,835 the day before.

New Car Dealer Mortality Put at 7.2% in Period

Detroit, June 25 (AP).—Mortality among new car dealers during the first five months of automobile and truck rationing, according to the trade publication Automotive & Aviation Industries, has been only 7.2 per cent. The publication says there were 37,607 dealers in business as of June 1, a decrease of 2,932 retail outlets from the 40,539 dealers in operation last January 1. The mortality rate is much lower than had been anticipated.

Among automobile repair shops, including new car dealers and independent services, but exclusive of filling stations, the survey says mortality has been even less than that of new car dealers alone. In the five months ended June 1, total repair shops had dropped only 3.4 per cent to 89,938 outlets.

Boeing Votes Dividend

New York, June 25 (AP).—Directors of Boeing Airplane Co. today declared a dividend of $1 payable July 23 to stockholders of record July 8. It represented the first payment since an initial dividend of 40 cents was disbursed December 8, 1937.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—The wheat market continued to drift lower today, as was the case yesterday, but this time the late rally was not enough to erase all of the early price losses.

Trade was confined mostly to commercial transaction, with hedge sales placed against purchases of new wheat. Speculative activity was chilled by unwillingness to venture on either side of the market due to the war situation and failure of Congress to settle controversies involving higher basic crop loans and Government sales of feed wheat.

Wheat was off as much as ¾ cent at one stage, but late short covering resulted in a close that was unchanged to ⅛ cent lower, compared with yesterday; July, 1.18⅛@⅛; September, 1.21@1.21⅛. Corn closed unchanged to ⅛ higher, July, 86½; September, 89⅛@89¼; oats, ⅛ off; soybeans, ¼ to ⅝ down; rye, ⅜ to ⅝ lower.

Six Rails Win Awards for Safety Record

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Six railroads and the Pullman Co. received awards today for their achievements in accident prevention in 1941.

The Eastern district of the Union Pacific Railroad was accorded the principal honor, the gold medal of the E. W. Harriman memorial awards. It was presented by E. Roland Harriman, son of the late railroad magnate, to W. M. Jeffers, Union Pacific president.

Other roads receiving awards were the New York Central; the Duluth, Missabe & Iron Range; the Colorado & Southern, Western Maryland and the Monongahela Railway.

Speaking at the ceremonies, Dr. Donald B. Armstrong, third vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., said: "If there is any one thing that will win the war it is transportation, and it inspires confidence regarding the outcome when we realize the great part being so magnificently played by the railroads of America."

David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, asserted that the rising toll of grade crossing accidents "is wasting lives and impeding the movement of fighting men and war materials."

Listen! with Glynn

We told you a few days ago how the daytime dramatic program called "Thus We Live," which is heard every Thursday and Friday over WJSV and the Columbia network at 9:45 a. m., had been rated in a recent survey as the fourth most popular daytime radio show in the country, despite the fact that it's only been on the air since April.

It's a dramatization of the worthy doings of the Red Cross throughout the world, which speaks well of the listeners' choice in these beleaguered days, and one of its highlights at each presentation is that portion of the program which originates in the studios of WJSV, with the popular Arch McDonald interviewing various persons well qualified to tell from personal experience of the good work the Red Cross is doing.

Today, speaking of those interviewees, is something of a red letter day for the program in that the Washington portion will have as its guest the highest-ranking diplomatic official ever to appear on a daytime radio series.

He is the Hon. Liu Chieh, the Minister-Counsellor of the Chinese Embassy, and, with Arch, he will discuss the enduring will to victory of his fellow countrymen after five years of punishing war with our common enemy, Japan, and also tell of the help being given the Chinese by the American Red Cross in that time, help which has contributed mightily to China's effort.

Preceding the talk, "Thus We Live" will dramatize the story of the work done by Red Cross representatives in China.

Contract Bridge

Dr. J. F. R. submits an unusual bidding problem, featuring these cards:

♠ Q 7 3
♡ 8 6 4
◇ J 8 5
♣ 10 7 5 2

"No part score, no one vulnerable, forcing two bids are not used because partners will keep open the bidding for one round unless partner has a complete bust," writes the contributor.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?	—

"What should South's next bid be?"

With South's hand we would pass one heart, but if we did bid one no trump we surely would respond over the force of three spades, believing that a player must be consistent in his bidding even if consistently wrong. If, by abandoning the very practical two-bid, the partners must stretch their necks to hold the bidding open for each other, they surely must obey a force, which very well may disguise a two-bid hand.

South can bid either four hearts or three no trump. We would prefer the latter because of the general emptiness of the hand.

Million More Sought for D.C. Defense Needs

Concern for Washington's inadequate police service was reflected in the Commissioners' second blackout bill, introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of the Senate District Committee.

Of the one million dollars additional civilian defense funds requested, $300,000 was asked to employ guards for reservoirs and to equip auxiliary police. Another $300,000 was asked for the purchase and storage of chemicals and apparatus for the purification and distribution of water and for other public utilities in case of breakdown or destruction by the enemy.

Medical and hospital treatment of volunteer defense workers injured in the line of duty accounted for $100,000 and wages for authorized personnel accounted for $100,000 more. A general contingency fund of $100,000 also was asked.

Certain broader emergency powers were asked in the bill, which amends one introduced in the House several months ago. The District would be enabled to take over private property for defense purposes, provided a just compensation is paid.

The District would not be liable for damages to property or to persons injured in the course of civilian defense duty. The hospital and medical care that would be provided by the $100,000 requested would be provided voluntarily by the District.

Except for a $400,000 increase in funds, this bill differs only slightly from the one introduced in the House. Action on the House bill has been held up pending approval by the Budget Bureau. The Budget Bureau reported favorably on the Senate bill.

The official order for tomorrow morning's air raid test was issued yesterday by the Commissioners, who stated that "devastating air raids are as likely to occur during the hours of daylight as during the hours of darkness."

In contrast to night tests, when safety is the prime concern, the possible disruption of business is causing more worry over tomorrow's test, which will occur for a period not exceeding a half hour some time between 10 a. m. and noon.

Defense officials urged residents to arrange their morning schedules so that a half-hour delay in a place of refuge will not seriously interfere with business engagements.

Burial of Corpl. John Holland Kearful, Washington attorney who enlisted four months ago in the United States Marine Corps, will be in Arlington National Cemetery following services tomorrow at 9 a. m. in the Saffell funeral home, 475 H Street Northwest. He attended George Washington University, where he was a member of the Friars fraternity, and then transferred to Southeastern University, receiving his degree from that school in 1934. Downs' Bill

Capitol Park May Be Site Of Dorms

The House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee will begin hearings Tuesday on a bill which would make emergency dormitory sites out of Capitol Grounds park areas adjoining Union Station Plaza, Chairman Lanham (Democrat) of Texas announced yesterday.

The bill, introduced by Representative Downs (Democrat) of Connecticut, would transfer the property to the jurisdiction of the Public Buildings Administration until a year after the war is over.

The land affected comprises most of the park areas between F Street Northeast, Second Street Northeast, North Capitol Street and E Street Northeast, lying in a rough semicircle around the station plaza. The tract located at Constitution and New Jersey Avenues is also transferred under the bill's provisions.

Authorization is also given in the measure for the furnishing of steam from the Capitol power plant to heat the buildings to be erected.

Traffic Hampered By Okla. Flood

Tulsa, Okla., June 25 (INS).—Swollen by heavy rains, the Arkansas River tonight reached a peak of 15.15 feet and overflowed into the lowlands, causing heavy damage to crops and homes.

The rise started yesterday, and by midnight highway police and Red Cross workers answered calls from families isolated by the rising waters.

Highways in three directions leading out of Tulsa were flooded and traffic was virtually at a standstill. Trains ran late and bus travel was slowed to a snail's pace.

Bender Assails PUC Member As Officious

Representative Bender (Republican) of Ohio yesterday denounced an unnamed member of the Public Utilities Commission for the "arbitrary and officious" way in which he acted at Wednesday's negotiations settling the taxi driver strike.

Said the Ohio member: "I think it is high time we got rid of some of these dictatorial, officious bureaucrats who are provoking these unnecessary strikes."

Until the differences between the cabbies and the Public Utilities Commission are settled, the drivers are allowed to operate on either the old or new rate-zone system, according to their preference. Most of them were reported using the old one.

Representative Bender commended the work of Chairman Randolph's House District Committee in bringing the strike to at least a temporary halt.

The committee, which agreed Wednesday to act as arbiters, made no move yesterday to reopen the issue. It is scheduled to hold hearings on the cab rate and zone situation.

Until a decision is reached, the drivers will not have to operate under the new system, sponsored by Gregory Hankin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, over which they went out on strike.

Koreans Appeal To Roosevelt, Churchill for Aid

The Sino-Korean People's League yesterday asked the President and Prime Minister Winston Churchill to give Korea moral, political and financial help so it can become a "more effective factor to the United Nations' war efforts in the Pacific."

A telegram, signed by Kilsoo K. Haan, Washington representative of the league with headquarters at 101 D Street Northeast, said "we believe in your honorable intentions. Korea today needs more than honorable intentions."

Krea was termed the first victim of Japanese aggression. The message asked admission of Korea to the Pacific War Council. "We have been and are still fighting the Japs . . . May we remind the Pacific War Council that Korea has always been and will be a strategic factor in peace or in war," the message said.

U. S. Will Accept Gift of Auto

The story of Mrs. Robert S. Pickens' limousine, which she offered to the Government, reached a happy conclusion yesterday as red tape unwound and the Treasury Department expressed its willingness to accept the gift.

Mrs. Pickens, of Janelia Farm, Ashburn, Va., wrote to The Post early in the week to learn the proper agency for handling her donation.

A reporter made the rounds of the United States Information Bureau opposite Post Square and learned that "definite legislation must be passed before such gifts can be accepted by the Government."

Clyde L. Garrett, former Representative from Texas now in the Office of Government Reports, made the original investigation of the problem Wednesday and, after reading of Mrs. Pickens' dilemma, attacked the question on a new front.

"I wasn't satisfied with the information I received from the Automobile Rationing Division," he said, "so I have looked further into the matter and have discovered that Congress very recently passed legislation authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to accept such gifts as Mrs. Pickens' auto.

"The legislation is under the Second War Powers Act. Section 1101 authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to accept or reject, on behalf of the United States, any gift of money or other property, real or personal, or services, made on the condition that it be used for a particular war purpose.

"A person wishing to donate an automobile to the United States should address a letter to Secretary Henry Morgenthau with complete description, locality, mechanical condition, and approximate value.

"The Secretary will have the car inspected and ascertain whether it will be accepted for services, or whether it should be sold and the proceeds given to the war contributions fund."

Mrs. Pickens, who had planned to turn her car over to the Red Cross Motor Corps when she heard the first news Wednesday, now has arranged to sign over the title of the limousine to the Secretary of the Treasury.
